Mull dropping of dollar as U.N. guideline

LONDON (UPI) — The U.S. dollar crept slightly up on European money markets today but remained so weak the United Nations said it was considering switching to another currency.

France boosted interest rates and slapped on tough financial controls, both to beat inflation and curb the fluctuating exchange rates President Georges Pompidou called "this deadly disease."

In Geneva, U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim said the world organization was studying changes in its dollar-based budget system because of the dollar's recent woes.

"The question is whether we should stick to the dollar as our guiding currency," Waldheim said.

Waldheim told a news conference his meetings here with the U.N. Coordindination Committee involve monetary troubles.

He said discussions center on whether to "switch to another currency" as the basis of financial accounting or use a combination of various currencies.

"The problem is becoming more and more acute," Waldheim said.

"Recommenations will be made to the next General Assembly," he said.

Waldheim said the Secretariat cannot by itself make changes. These have to be approved by the General Assembly.

While the dollar slid up and down on European markets in trading to mid-day, French Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing said the monetary upheavals which have rocked the international financial system this year posed as a major threat to the West.

"France is seriously concerned," he told a news conference. "The French government considers it unrealistic to make trade talks move forward so long as the monetary upheavals continue."

Giscard d'Estaing stuck by France's position that exchange rates must be fixed, not floating to find their own level in the marketplace. Twenty-four hours earlier Pompidou told his ministers "France and Europe must act promptly to defend their currencies against this deadly disease" of unstable exchange rates.

Brokers and dealers on European exchanges insisted the dollar was worth more than today's rates of exchange. Day after day for more than a month the dollar's value has tumbled in terms of nearly every other currency.

Four area men arrested as drug ring is cracked

2 million pills confiscated by police agencies

An alleged drug ring accused of selling two million pills a week throughout Southern California was broken up with the arrest of five men Tuesday night in an Ontario motel, police reported.

The arrests were made by 11 law enforcement officers from Pomona, Ontario, Baldwin Park and the state Bureau of Narcotics. The five were seized after an undercover Covina police detective paid $10,000 for 175,000 of the pills, mostly amphetamines, officers reported.

Those arrested were Donald Lawrence Mansfield Jr., 24, 1081 E. Lincoln Ave., Pomona, a painter; Lawrence Earl Tanner, 25, Ontario, a mechanic; Chester Burrus Wells, 22, 255 S. Euclid Ave., Upland, a salesman; Kent Eric Tuttle, 23, Grand Junction, Colo., a student; and Henry Washington Davis, 27, 2816 Pamela Drive, Chino, a carpenter.

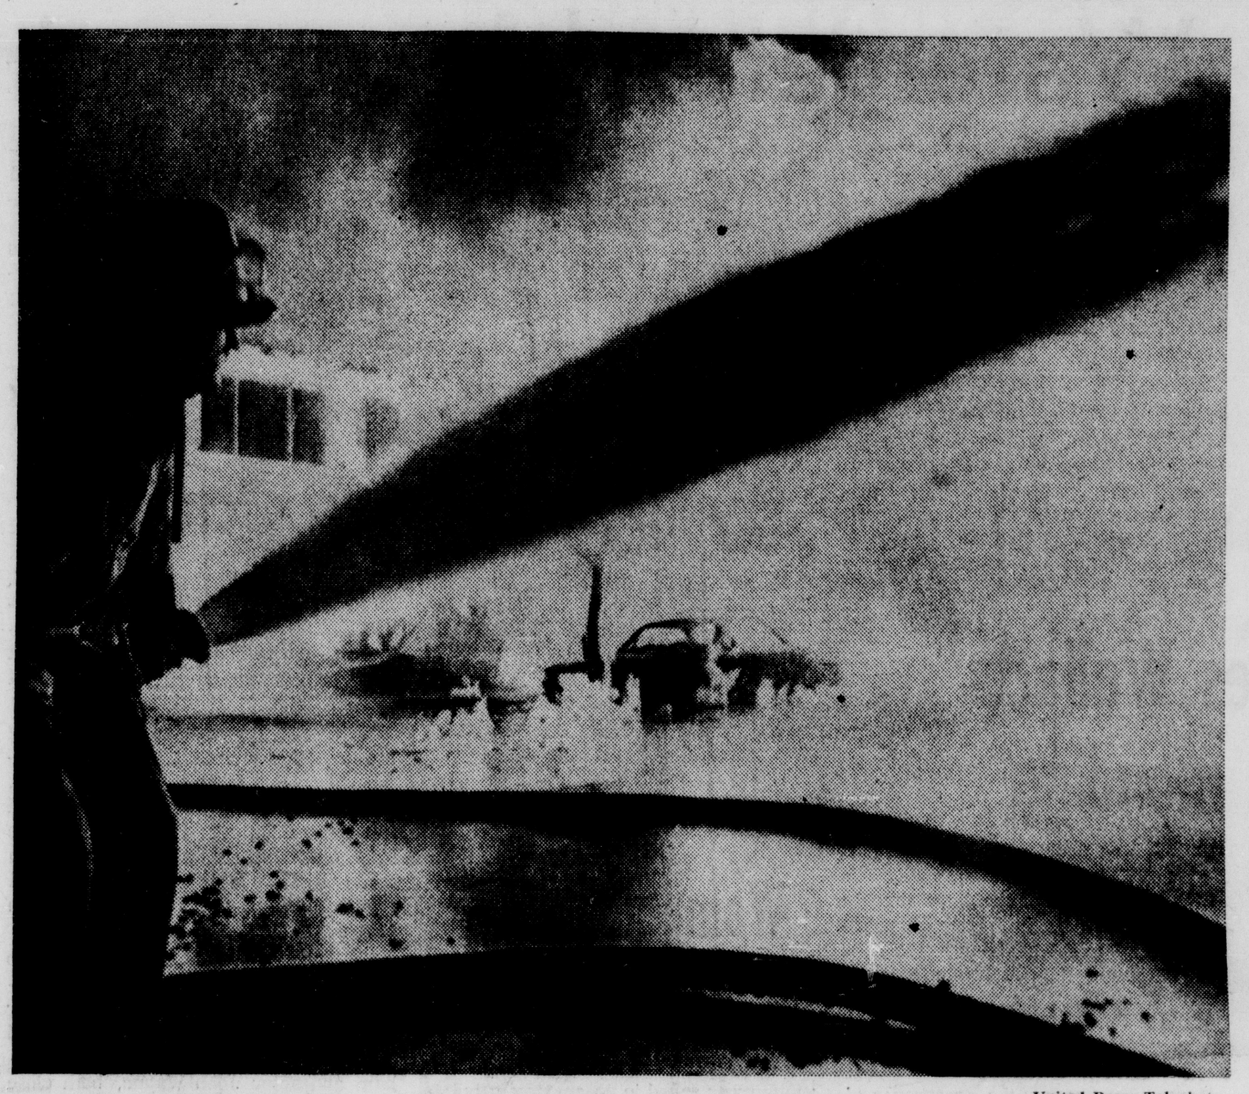

The suspects were charged with possession of drugs for sale and sale of drugs. Prosecution will be in West Valley Municipal Court, Ontario.

The investigation began several months ago as information began to be gathered by the state agency. Authorities said the ring sold drugs from San Diego northward and from Riverside to Baldwin Park. The drugs were believed to have been smuggled across the border from Mexico.

The suspects were booked at the Pomona city jail by Pomona detectives Gordon Zbinden and Edward Staudenmayer.

The suspects arrived at the motel in two cars, officers said, but left. Later, they returned and the deal was consummated in one of the motel units shortly after 10 p.m., police said.

Police described three of the arrested men as bodyguards and two as sellers. The pills were confiscated in bags of 25,000 each. Street value was estimated at about $35,000.

RESIDENTIAL INFERNO

A fireman faces intense heat of a natural gas-fed fire which engulfed a Long Beach residential street, apartment house, left, and parked autos after the explosion of an underground gas main in the street Wednesday night. Several injuries have been reported, but no fatalities.

Chino dad kills son in accident

CHINO — A Chino man shot and killed his 25-year-old son early Wednesday in an apparent accident, following a fireworks-throwing incident at a block party, sheriff's deputies said.

The victim, Raymond Lee Eaton, was shot by his father, Wayne, 49, across the street from the family residence at 15031 Beechwood Lane.

According to sheriff's deputies, a block party attended by between 300 and 900 persons was in progress late Tuesday night and early Wednesday morning at a neighborhood park at Beechwood Lane and Rosewood Way in the Chino area.

Some in the crowd became unruly shortly after midnight, with a rock and bottle-throwing incident ensuing. Sheriff's deputies believe that the elder Eaton was angry over objects being thrown into his yard and went into his home and got a revolver for protection.

When fireworks were tossed into the yard, with sparks hitting Mrs. Eaton, the elder Eaton fired a warning shot in the air while his son crossed the street from the home and became engaged in a fight.

Crossing the street to aid his son, Eaton also became engaged in the scuffle. One shot was fired from the gun during the fight and the son was hit.

He was pronounced dead on arrival at Chino General Hospital. Funeral arrangements are pending at Todd Memorial Chapel in Pomona.

The shooting is still under investigation. No arrests have been made.

Long Beach gas blast, fire injure 4 persons

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — A gas main exploded Wednesday night, ripping a trench 40 feet long in the street, blasting a hole in a two story apartment house and starting a fire that destroyed the building.

Two persons were burned, one seriously, and two were hurt jumping out of a second story window to escape the flames.

Firemen said they were astonished nobody was killed. Ten persons were in the eight-unit building when the explosion occurred at 8:45.

A passing car may have ignited a collection of fumes from a slow leak in the gas main under the street, police said.

A witness, who was walking his dog, said he saw "the gas main in the street explode and a wall of fire engulf the front of the building."

A towering blowtorch of flame roared from the ruptured pipe for almost two hours before firemen found the valve controlling it and shut off the gas supply.

At least four cars were extensively damaged by the explosion and fire. Damage was estimated at $200,000.

Lana Salyer, 22, was being treated at Community Hospital for serious burns on the lower part of her body. Her husband, Arthur, also 22, suffered less serious burns, the hospital said.

Daniel Callecod, 23, and Carolyn Campbell, 20, hurt their ankles jumping from second story windows.

Callecod said he heard a "loud, hissing noise" just before the explosion.

$700,000 aboard plane hijacked by Latin terrorists

By United Press International

Argentina's Bank of the Nation said there was $700,000 in cash aboard the hijacked Argentine airliner which landed today in Cuba with 26 hostages after a flight which took it across Northern Argentina, Chile, Peru and Panama.

A bank statement issued in Buenos Aires said the money, escorted by three bank officials, was being sent to the town of Jujuy 1,000 miles north of Buenos Aires for loans on the forthcoming sugar crop in that region. The plane, which had 80 passengers and crew aboard at the time, was seized by six or more terrorists on the flight to Jujuy.

The hijackers, believed to be members of a guerrilla group blamed for numerous acts of violence in Argentina, took over the short range Boeing 737 Wednesday with sawed off shotguns and grenades and demanded payment of $200,000 for charity. They made no mention of the $700,000 and it was not known if they knew it was aboard.

17 hurt as church bus overturns

SAN DIMAS — A church bus went out of control and overturned here Wednesday, injuring 17 persons.

Only one person was seriously injured in the accident at 9:30 a.m. on Via Verde Avenue. He is James Clay, 11, of Santa Ana. He was taken to Covina Inter-Community hospital for treatment of a dislocated hip. A hospital spokesman said today that Clay is in satisfactory condition, and will remain in the hospital for several days.

The other passengers were treated for minor cuts and fractures and released Wednesday.

The bus, which was destined for the American Baptist Seminary of the West in Covina, originated in Anaheim. Its passengers were all members of the Bethel Baptist Church in Anaheim.

According to the California Highway Patrol in Baldwin Park, the bus was traveling downhill on Via Verde when its brakes failed as it approached a curve. The bus hit the guard rail and rode it 50 feet before plunging over the embankment and smashing through a backyard fence of a private home at the bottom of the hill.

The estimated speed of the bus was between 30 and 40 miles an hour, according to the CHP.

Home fireworks keep area firemen hopping

Backyard fireworks displays set by citizens kept firemen in Claremont and Pomona busy during Fourth of July celebrations Wednesday despite the fact that those and other area cities staged fireworks shows.

Otherwise, holiday celebrations in Pomona Valley communities went off without incident except in Claremont, where police reported that ground glass was put into snow cones which were distributed during the annual parade.

An estimated 14,000 persons watched the fifth annual Fourth of July Fireworks Show at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds, sponsored by the Pomona Firemen's Association.

Claremont officials estimated 3,500 persons lined Indian Hill boulevard to watch the parade in the afternoon and 5,600 attended the fireworks show later at Pomona College Alumni Field. San Dimas and La Verne reported large crowds at pancake breakfasts and parades in both communities and several thousand watched the fireworks show at Bonita High School in La Verne.

An estimated 4,000 persons gathered at the annual All States Picnic in Ontario Wednesday and parade down Euclid Avenue.

The weatherman cooperated Wednesday and temperatures didn't reach as high as anticipated. Pomona reported an afternoon high temperature of 92 degrees.

A Pomona fireman was injured Wednesday evening fighting one of several fires which firemen believe was caused by citizens setting off fireworks. James A. Arnold was treated at Pomona Valley Community Hospital for burns to his left leg and had cinders removed from his eyes.

His leg went through the roof of a residence owned by Victor Reid, 187 E. Green St., Claremont. The attic of the house was totally involved in flames when firemen arrived. Damage was confined mostly to the roof. Arnold was treated at the hospital and released.

Another fire at 939 Fenn Court in Claremont also burned the roof of a house owned by Robert Bitner. Firemen believe some type of fireworks started the blaze. No immediate estimate of the damage was available.

Fireworks were also blamed for starting a fire in the bushes near the home of Paul Newton, 1738 Clemson Ave., Claremont, about 9 p.m. Wednesday.

Pomona firemen believe fireworks started a fire in the roof of an apartment at 690 N. Currier Place Wednesday night. Damage is estimated at $200. Children playing with fireworks in a garage at 2194 Santa Saticoy Ave., which caused a lot of smoke and excitement, but no structure damage to the garage.

A series of small grass and trash fires also were put out by Pomona firemen. The fires were cuased by children and adults playing with fireowrks. At each call, firemen pointed out to the offenders that firewarks are not legal in Pomona.

After the Claremont parade, Mrs. Agnes M. McGaha, 424 Harrison Ave., told police that several snow cones containing small glass particles had been passed out along the route. Officers examined several cones supplied by Mrs. McGaha and found the contained bits of glass.

Two Long Beach youths, David J. Yachimowicz, 19, and William L. Long, 17, said they passed out the cones free along Indian Hill Boulevard between Fourth and Sixth streets, but were unaware they contained glass. They said they got the cones from a Hollywood firm and earlier had sold many of them at a parade in Ontario. The ones they passed out in Claremont were left over from the Ontario parade. Yachimowicz and Long said they gave the cones away because they had no license to sell them in Claremont, but didn't want them to go to waste.

No ill effects were reported either in Claremont or Ontario.

Five-point plan for peace proposed by U.S. at European security talks

HELSINKI (UPI) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers, declaring that "Europe's security is indivisible from our own," proposed a five-point plan for peace today at the European security conference.

The proposals which Rogers placed before the meeting of 35 foreign ministers ranged from an exchange of military information between East and West to lowered barriers to trade, and, "of paramount importance," a freer flow of both people and information between the two halves of the continent.

Rogers stressed the need to outlaw "the use or threat of force" between nations. He called this "the keystone in the arch of a durable peace."

"The United States has learned from our experience— that Europe's security is indivisible from our own," Rogers told the conference. "Our goal should be a continent in which no nation feels threatened, a continent open to the free flow of people and ideas."

Rogers, alluding to European fears that Russia and America may make deals behind Europe's back, assured the ministers that "the United States and the Soviet Union have a major contribution to make to a secure and cooperative Europe. The recent improvement in our relations is helping to bring Europe together again."

The five points of Rogers' plan are as follows:

— The "elaboration with precision" of principles on relations between nations. These principles—including the banning of force and the noninterference in other nations' affairs—are agreed by all 35 nations here, but East and West have disputed their exact meaning.

—Agreement on exchanging of "certain military information" and exchanging observers at military maneuvers.

—Development of ways to solve disputes between nations "which might have the potential for confrontation."

—Reduction of barriers to trade and cooperation in science and technology.

—"Specific and meaningful ways to facilitate human contacts, the freer dissemination of information and the broadening of cultural and educational cooperation."

Rogers said the United States will have specific proposals later. But he cited a few concrete ideas today—more freedom for newsmen to work abroad, easier travel, and more contact between East and West by members of divided families and young people.

Family talked him out of it

Nixon considered resigning—Julie

By HELEN THOMAS

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — Julie Nixon Eisenhower says her father was so overwhelmed when he learned the scope of the Watergate scandal that he thought about resigning the presidency for the good of the country. But the family talked him out of it, she said.

She said the question of the President resigning came up at a family gathering at Camp David, their mountaintop retreat in Maryland, May 4.

The family talked him out of quitting, she said, because they felt it would be "an admission of wrong doing" and that he was needed in the presidency.

"He was playing the devil's advocate one evening, saying...well, see, the thing is, he really loves the country and he'd do anything...that was best for the country. You know, he would say 'should I resign? Would it be better for the country? Would the wounds heal faster? Would it (the country) be able to move faster to other things?

"We said no. We didn't think he should because resigning would be an admission of wrong doing and we also felt that he was the man for the job and he had started things and needed to finish them. But he is really that kind of person. I think it was more than just a rhetorical question. I think he really thought 'will this end everything?'"

Julie was interviewed by two wire service reporters at the San Clemente Inn Tuesday, two days before her 25th birthday.

Tracing her father's reactions to the Watergate scandal, she said she felt Nixon "was terribly distressed and shaken because of the things he found out in March."

"Just realizing what the whole Watergate thing was," she said. "He was just really in the dark." She said the conversation about resigning took place just four days after the president ousted his top aides, H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and John Dean.

"The fact that he had to completely reorganize his staff...that he depended heavily on, that is no longer there," she went on, "and he has certain working patterns and did things through his staff system. It's very orderly and an organized way of working. It's difficult to have an upheaval."

The President's soft spoken, vivacious youngest daughter has been a self-appointed public defender of her father during the Watergate scandal. She has traveled the nation making speeches in his behalf, maintaining a busy schedule.

What struck him the most? "I guess...just realizing what the whole Watergate thing was. My father really just had complete faith in everyone around him," she said, explaining why it took the president so long to realize something was wrong.

"All I can say is that he was being assured that no one else (in the White House) was involved," she said.

Julie said her father has been saddened particularly by the number of bright, young men around him whose jobs and futures have been ruined by their involvement in the Watergate.

"They weren't out for personal gain and that's part of the tragedy," Julie confided. "I think that's hurt him deeply too...to see these men, you know, finished as far as any kind of government job or political..."

She said the President hadn't made any public judgements, however, on which members of his staff let him down.

The President's present mood, she said, is "very good. He's moving ahead, and he's going to wait until the hearings are completed before he makes another statement (on Watergate). I think that's only fair, not to prejudge."

Watergate charges against four urged?

NEW YORK (UPI) — CBS News Wednesday said it has learned the original government investigators recommended that special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox charge former presidential aides H.R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, John Mitchell and John Dean as "ringleaders in a conspiracy to obstruct justice."

The report by correspondent Daniel Schorr on the CBS Evening News also said the report describes as "co-conspirators" former acting FBI director L. Patrick Gray, former White House Girdon Strachan, and former deputy campaign director Jeb Magruder but "recommended offers of guilty pleas on reduced charges in return for cooperation."

"It's understood that Herbert Kalmbach, President Nixon's former personal lawyer, is getting complete immunity from prosecution," Schorr reported.

Schorr said the investigators, Earl Silbert, Seymour Glanzer and Donald Campbell, who resigned last Friday, proposed two motives for the cover-up of administration in the Watergate scandal:

"1. Fear that disclosure of higher ups would cast a shadow over President Nixon and hurt his chances for reelection;

2. Fear that it would open the trial to previous illegal acts involving Gordon Liddy and Howard Hunt...including the break-in of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist."

He said the evidence against Haldeman, Ehrlichman, Mitchell and Dean was described as "documentary as well as verbal."

Schorr said the report "does not deal with the position of President Nixon, although some of the evidence in it is understood to raise questions about his role."

Kennedy praises Wallace in party fence mending

DECATUR, Ala. (UPI) — Sen. Edward F. Kennedy, D-Mass., apparently moving to reunify the Democratic Party, spoke at a ceremony honoring Gov. George C. Wallace for patriotism Wednesday and lashed the Nixon Administration for "trampling upon the creed of democracy."

Kennedy praised Wallace as the embodiment of "the spirit of every American to speak his mind and be heard—fearlessly and in any part of the country."

And while noting that he and Wallace "have different opinions on some important issues," Kennedy said they have one thing in common: A dislike of the tactics of the Nixon Administration.

"We don't compile lists of enemies whose careers and lives are to be shattered because of their disagreement," he said. "We don't use the tactics of the criminal or the power of the law in order to silence those whose ideas of politics are different from our own."

In his strongest criticism of the Watergate scandal, Kennedy said the Nixon Administration had "transgressed, ignored and trampled upon the creed of democracy."

Kennedy told newsmen later that he was not now in favor of impeaching Nixon, but he might be later if the facts brought out in the Watergate hearings are not refuted.

Wallace refused to discuss the issue, saying "There's plenty of time to talk about Watergate later."

Many observers saw the appearance of Kennedy with Wallace as a first step toward patching up the tattered Democratic Party by the expected 1976 presidential candidate. National Democratic Chairman Robert Strauss was one of these, calling the joint appearance a "benchmark in party unification."

Kennedy said he talked with Wallace about 45 minutes before his speech, but that national politics were not discussed. It is too early, he said, to speculate on the 1976 presidential campaign.

A Kennedy aide later said that while the senator was not interested in forging any new pilitical bonds with Wallace, he was trying to "mend some fences" in the South.

Billy Graham 'mystified' by report on tax audit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Evangelist Billy Graham says he is "completely mystified" by a report that White House pressure was used to block an audit of his income taxes.

"I have never asked for any intervention and I have not been aware of any intervention," the magazine Christianity Today quoted Graham on Wednesday as saying.

Ousted White House Counsel John W. Dean III testified at the Senate Watergate hearings that persons brought pressure on him to help stop tax audits that were being made on some of President Nixon's friends.

"I was told I was to do something about these audits that were being performed on two friends of the President, that they felt they were being harassed and the like," Dean testified Friday. He said he later saw a memo on which then White House aide John J. Caulfield had man had written "This has already been taken care of."

The Washington Post reported two days previously that the Senate committee had a memorandum that former Whte House aide John J. Caulfield had sent to Dean about tax audits on Graham and actor John Wayne, both close friends of Nixon.

The Post said the memo also had a routing slip addressed to Haldeman and his assistant, Larry Higby. It said that scribbled on the slip, in different handwriting, were: "Next question: Can we do anything to help?" and "No, it's already covered."

The committee has not released any such memo.

"I'm completely mystified," the magazine quoted Graham as saying. He is one of its contributing editors.

Graham said that as far as he knows, audits on his returns have been settled in the local Asheville, N.C., office of the Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

Woman raped on building site

CLAREMONT — A 55-year-old local woman was raped in an apartment building construction site south of Arrow Highway near Indian Hill Boulevard, police reported.

The victim went there to inspect the buildings and possibly inquire about renting an apartment. While she was there she was approached by a man who said he was a security guard. He took her deeper into the site, grabbed her and attacked her after warning, "Don't scream or I'll kill you."

The man was described as a Negro about 25, 6-feet-2, 190 pounds. He wore a blue T-shirt, dark trousers and two-tone platform shoes.

A native of Los Angeles, Hildreth graduated from Cal State Los Angeles in 1962, and received his law degree from UCLA three years later.

He is presently a partner in an Ontario law firm. Prior to joining the firm, Hildreth was a deputy district attorney for San Bernardino County from 1967-70.

Kennedy and Wallace -- politics southern style

DECATUR, Ala. (UPI) — Some came in pickup trucks with gun racks hanging on the back and foxtails flapping in the breeze. some came in air conditioned sedans.

They included antibusing groups from Michigan and hardhats from Cleveland, but most were hill people from northern Alabama, many barefoot, wearing blue jeans and overalls. When Sen. Ted Kennedy appeared, they gave him warm applause.

But the rebel yells and waving arms and shouts of "Amen, Governor!" made it obvious who they really came to see.

Some stood for hours at the Independence Day celebration with the soft Alabama mud oozing through their toes to see and hear Gov. George Wallace. After a while, some just gave up and sat down in the mud puddles.

Before he spoke, the conservative Alabama governor was praised as a patriot and given a special award by Kennedy, whose brother President John F. Kennedy thwarted Wallace's "schoolhouse door" stand 10 years ago with federal troops.

When Wallace finally rolled his wheelchair onto the stage, the crowd whooped. They screamed when he stood erect in a special platform and they cheered when he spoke.

Wallace said he wasn't going to make a speech—just a response to the a special patriotism award presented by Kennedy during a joint appearance at "Spirit of Ameirca" festival designed to unify the liberal and conservative wings of the Democratic party.

"I didn't want to speak this long," he said, "But with a crowd like this I just can't quit."

And the withered farmers and weary looking housewives sitting on the plastic lawn chairs and in the mud hollered, "Amen, Governor!"

With Kennedy looking on, Wallace talked about the people of Alabama, how they love freedom and are just as good as any people in the nation.

Wallace's speech was not new. Most of the people had heard it so many times its themes were like the refrains of an old hymn. But nobody was tired of listening.

One woman handed her three-year-old baby to a deputy sheriff so he could lift the child above the crowd for a glimpse of Wallace. As the deputy held the boy, looking at Wallace perched on his useless legs, he turned to the woman and said, "Ain't it a damn shame about a man like that?"

"It shore is," she said.

Tito pilgrimage to battle site

TJENTISTE, Yugoslavia (UPI)—President Tito made a pilgrimage Wednesday to the rugged mountain slopes where he led thousands of half-starved Communist partisans against 11 times as many Nazi troops in Yugoslavia's bloodiest battle of the war.

Tito reminisced with 6,000 other survivors in the Sutjeska River Gorge beneath the Bosnian Mountains on the 30th anniversary of the battle in which 19,000 half-starved resistance fighters fought off 120,000 encircling Nazi-led troops for four desperate weeks. After losing 7,000 men, the partisans finally broke through the encirclement, carrying 4,000 wounded.

"Our ammunition was so low that we had to think about each bullet," Tito, who wore dark glasses and a light blue marshall's uniform, told the crowd. "Nobody in 1943 sent us even one pistol or bullet."

Will broadcast from sea--McIntire

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Rev. Carl McIntire says he will set up a radio station in the Atlantic Ocean to broadcast his fundamentalist points of view. He plans to call it "Radio Free America."

McIntire announced his plans at an Independence Day rally on the steps of the building where the charter declaring the colonies' intent to break with England was signed.

An advocate of "total victory in Vietnam," McIntire, dressed in colonial garb and wearing a white wig, led a group of about 50 persons in a mock funeral for his two Pennsylvania radio stations which went off the air Wednesday. The Federal Communications Commission revoked the license of both stations in 1970 after they allegedly refused to give equal time to those who disagreed with McIntire's views.

He said the new station would be anchored off the shores of New Jersey and would be "most controversial station in the country. We believe in freedom. We just want the government to leave us alone."

60,000 in tribute to Louis Armstrong

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ten thousand jazz fans and more than 50 musicians and singers were on hand for an outdoor tribute to the late jazz great Louis Armstrong Wednesday.

Mayor John V. Lindsay and Armstrong's widow, Lucille, dedicated the Singer Bowl at the 1964 New York World's Fair site to "Satchmo," who would have been 73 years old Wednesday. Armstrong died last year.

Among the performers were pianist Eubie Blake, trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie and Ella Fitzgerald, who said Armstrong's life story proved "no matter where you come from, it can happen."

African leader says U. S. is meddler

KAMPALA, UKGANDA (UPI) — president Idi Amin has cabled President Nixon wishes for a "quick recovery from the Watergate affair" while complaining that the United States meddles too much in the business of other nations.

In a July 4 congratulations message, Amin commended the United States for defending its identity and helping countries struggling against "European capitalism." However, he said, U.S. economic might makes it "prone to interfering in the internal affairs of other countries."

Two hurt as car goes off road

SAN DIMAS — A motorist and his passenger suffered similar injuries Wednesday when their car ran off San Dimas Canyon Road and down an eight-foot embankment.

Both were admitted to Pomona Valley Community Hospital where their conditions are termed satisfactory.

Bean was going north on San Dimas Canyon Road about 40 miles an hour and pulled to the edge of the roadway when spotting a southbound vehicle as he rounded a curve.

The car went out of control and slid broadside across the roadway before going down the embankment, highway patrolmen said. The accident occurred north of Foothill Boulevard.

Fireworks go off in crowd

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Thirteen person were injured when a rocket failed to go off in mid air during July 4 fireworks display at Derks Field here.

Most sustained minor injuries, but the most seriously hurt is 81-year-old Ronald Dautel, of Salt Lake City, who was reported in satisfactory condition today, with eye injuries.

Wrong-side parking

Three booked in family fracas; four police officers treated

POMONA — Three members of a family were arrested Tuesday afternoon in a fracas with police which began when an officer cited a woman for parking on the wrong side of the street.

During the melee, several officers said they were hit, bitten, kicked and scratched and afterward, four were treated at Pomona Valley Community Hospital. The arrests were completed after the arrival of additional officers at the scene — 1804 S. White Ave.

Those arrested were Lenetta Flournoy, 26, 2163 Laurel Ave.; LaVerne Renee Flournoy, 22, 1804 S. White Ave., and her husband, Vernon Windell Flournoy, 23.

Officers Terry Prentice and Lorenzo Zambrano said Mrs. Lenetta Flournoy parked on the wrong side of the street in front of LaVerne Flournoy's house and then backed into the driveway when they approached. They said she slammed the glove compartment door on Prentice's hand when he tried to get the car's registration papers, then hit him in the face with her fist and ran.

During the melee, the officers reported, LaVerne kicked and struck the officers and Flournoy, a welder, tried to get Zambrano's gun.

Ultimately, Lenetta Flournoy was booked on charges of battery on a police officer, resisting arrest and parking on the wrong side of White Avenue. LaVerne Flournoy and her husband were charged with battery on a police officer, resisting arrest and attempting to free a prisoner.

3 grants for library to help with cataloging of volumes

CLAREMONT — Three grants from an anonymous foundation have enabled the School of Theology at Claremont Library to undertake the cataloging of some 40,000 volumes previously inaccessible.

Since 1972 the school has received grants of $30,000, $22,000 and $6,309.

The estimated 40,000 unprocessed volumes consist primarily of gifts of collections by friends and also of books that were brought to Claremont when the school relocated here from USC in 1956.

The library now has some 150,000 volumes. Due to the rapid growth of holdings, the staff has been unable to complete the lengthy and expensive process of cataloging necessary for a theological school research library.

The recent financial grants have made possible the addition of two professional catalogers to the library staff. Also, the library has leased a cataloger's camera unit that speeds up the cataloging process.

Books are now being cataloged at the rate of 2,100 a month. Termination date for the grant program and completion of the project is September 1974.

Revived proposal to build tank draws fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two years ago Congress canceled a Defense Department plan to build a new line of tanks at $1 million each. Now the Pentagon is back with a proposed, less sophisticated and less expensive substitute costing $922,000 each.

The earlier tank was called the MBT-70, or Main Battle Tank. The new one is called the XM-1. But Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., who disclosed the cost Wednesday, calls it "Son of Main Batle Tank."

Aspin said it took him three months to get the price tag declassified by the Pentagon.

He said the total program is to cost about $3 billion for 3,312 of the new versions. The MBT program was to have cost $2.3 billion.

"Apparently the price tag on Son of Main Battle Tank will be as outrageous as Main Battle Tank," Aspin said.

The XM-1 figure includes research and development costs. A previous Army estimate of $500,000 per XM-1 did not include research and development.

The MBT-70 program began as a joint project with West Germany to replace the Korean war-era M-60 tank. West Germany bowed out when the cost estimate reached $650,000 a tank, and by 1971, when the estimate soared over $1 million even for an "austere" version, Congress canceled the project.

Instead it appropriated funds for the XM-1.

"By the time the Army actually starts building this new tank I am sure that additional inflation will drive the price tag well over a million dollars," Aspin said.

Like the MBT-70, the XM-1 will have doubleplated armor, a low silhouette that will make it more difficult to spot and the capability of firing on the move with great accuracy.

But XM-1 will not have the MBT's "squatting" capability, a hydro-pneumatic suspension system that could raise or lower the tank's profile by 18 inches, and instead of firing antitank missiles the XM-1 will carry conventional tank guns.

Whisky guard lays an egg

By JOSEPH FIRMAN

Everything's just ducky up in Dumbarton, Scotland, where a whisky maufacturer has enlisted 27 geese to guard his stock of 30 million gallons of whisky maturing in casks.

I'll say sauce for the goose.

Imagine 30 million gallons of Scotch. Staggers the imagination — and a lot of drinkers. That's enough to float the British Navy—or sink it. What a way to go.

Tom Scott, managing director of the whisky firm, recalled that sacred geese of ancient Rome awakened the guards one night when the Gauls were trying to sneak in and capture the city. Some gall!

When in Dumbarton, do as the Romans do, Scott reasoned, so he hired a platoon of web-footed watchmen for his casks. I'm surprised he didn't go looking for a Minotaur or a Cyclops or two.

Scott said the geese had been trained to be sensitive to people approaching the whisky stores. When intruders draw near, the geese set up a fearfu lcackling that alerts the guards — if they are still alertable.

Geese have even better hearing than dogs, Scott says. One obvious shortcoming of the goose-stepping guard is that they are not able to fasten onto an intruder's leg or slash his jugular. Well, you can't have everything.

However, I was alarmed to learn that U.S. security forces guarding nuclear installations in the Nevada desert have learned of the unusual alarm system and want to take a gander at the plan.

Steady men! Don't let all that whisky go to your head. It's one thing to put a flock of feathered sentinels around a monstrous stash of booze. It's quite another to set them to guard a nation's security.

The thought of those fiendish Russian spies creeping up on our little atomic barnyard is enough to give a body gooseflesh.

The Soviets would probably bring in a lot of voluptuous female geese to try to lure our boys off into the bushes for a gooseneck while the Reds plundered our nuclear nest.

Mr. Scott sid geese make better guards than men for other reasons. They (geese) are cheap, they eat grass, they lay eggs, and they don't drink whisky. Few GIs of my acquaintance lay eggs, but I wouldn't trust one of them with a warehouseful of Scotch.

Be kind to your web-footed friend; that goose may be somebody's watchman.

Ireland seems to be closer than ever to England

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG

LONDON (UPI) — The British and Irish Republic governments have come closer together than at any time since the Ulster bloodshed erupted more than four years ago.

A three-hour meeting Monday between British Prime Minister Edward Heath and Liam Cosgrave, the Irish Republic's government chief since March, has been hailed by officials from both countries as marking what could be a new, more hopeful phase in relations between London and Dublin.

Not only did they agree to work together for a solution to the violence racking Ulster, but Cosgrave came nearer than any Irish Republic leader in recent years to soothing British worries about Dublin's attitude in the crisis.

In a speech Monday evening to a dinner of the "1900 Club," a Conservative party dining association, Cosgrave declared that, while ultimate reunification of north and south in Ireland remains his country's long-term aim, Ireland does not plan to push it in the immediate future.

In fact, he ruled out any suggestion of a united Ireland in present circumstances.

Still more striking, he delivered a serious warning that a British military pullout from Ulster now would plunge the province into civil war —a prospect, he said, no British or Irish Republic prime minister could regard with equanimity.

Throughout his speech and a news conference held after his meeting with Heath, Cosgrave stressed reconciliation between the Protestant majority and the Roman Catholic minority as the most urgent need for the province.

He also laid great stress on his government's hope that the new constitution Britain is legislating for Northern Ireland will be followed without too much delay by setting up a Council of Ireland, which Britain proposed in a government White Paper earlier this year.

Cosgrave said its functions would be a matter for decision at a tripartite meeting between the British and Irish Republic government and elected representatives of the people of Northern Ireland.

But he said it could play a major role in bringing about reconciliation.

"I would emphasize that an effective link of this kind designed to promote reconciliation in Ireland is not something which would follow a settlement in the North," Cosgrave said. "It would be rather an intrinsic part of such a settlement."

British officials say, although no further meetings with Heath were scheduled, more are likely in the coming months.

In any case, they say, the two prime ministers will maintain close contact through diplomatic channels.

Cup of coffee will cost more in next year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Confirming earlier warnings which indicated continued upward pressure on coffee prices, the Agriculture Department predicted Tuesday that world coffee production will drop 9 per cent in the 1973-74 marketing year, which begins Oct 1.

The department's Foreign Agricultural Service (FAS) said its first estimate of the 1973-74 world crop is 66.9 million bags. This is about 9 per cent below the 1972-73 harvest of 73.2 million bags primarily because of a July, 1972, freeze which destroyed most of the crop in the Brazilian state of Parana.

Supplies available for export in 1973-74 were estimated at 46.9 million bags, down about 11 per cent from the current marketing year.

The FAS said the 1973-74 estimate is "substantially below current estimated world import demand.... and will probably cause a sharp drawdown in world stocks."

One too many cars on wrong side of street

SAN ANSELMO, Calif. (UPI) — Dean Boyd, who has two cars and only a one-car garage, lives on the San Anselmo side of Oak Avenue, the boundary with the town of Ross. On Boyd's side of the street, parking is illegal between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m.

He was in court Monday for the sixth time in his fight against the deluge of 150 parking tickets that has resulted from parking his car in front of his home. He pleaded not guilty and was freed on $285 bail.

Sympathetic judges have reduced his fines from $15 for each offense to $1.50. The city of San Anselmo argues that the overnight parking ban cuts crime, provides more room on narrow streets and allows street sweepers to operate unimpaired.

Water need of plants in arid areas studied

Science Today
By PATRICK A. MALONE

COLUMBIA, Mo. (UPI) — A University of Missouri-Columbia biologist is spending a year in Israel studying exactly how much water plants in arid climates need to thrive.

Dr. Jacob Levitt, professor of biological sciences for 30 years at MU, is taking a sabbatical to coordinate research efforts at an Israeli government agricultural research station, where the focus will be on stresses produced in plants by too little —and too much—water.

Levitt, who has specialized in environmental plant stresses, notes that arid nations need to be as efficient as possible in irrigation efforts.

"Science has already learned how to double crop yields without an increase in water," he said in a telephone interview. "Further research we hope will shwo what happens to plants receiving different amounts of water.

"Maybe beyond a certain amount crop yields will drop. Or the plant may grow normally but not flower or fruit properly. The research will really involve understanding the physiology of plants under differing water conditions."

Levitt's work at the Volcani Institute, Bet Dagan, Israel, will concentrate on improving crop yields, something he says may become vital to this country soon.

"Even here food problems have created concern that we may have some difficulty in feeding our own people in the next year or two," he said.

Another area of plant stress he worked on 12 years ago was freezing. Levitt demonstrated that chemical changes occur in proteins at subfreezing temperatures to make them inactive in plant cell membranes. The inactivity causes the membranes to become more porous, which allows water to enter the cell. The cell is destroyed when the water inside freezes.

Other types of plants have a better ability to keep water outside their cells, thereby enabling them to survive lower temperatures.

Levitt said he believes that with further research plants could be protected from environmental stress by some sort of chemical spray.

Rule targets frozen pizza

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Meatless pizzas would have to have at least 12 per cent cheese under a new rule proposed recently by the Agriculture Department.

Officials said their proposal would not apply to pizzas baked in pizzerias and restaurants. It would apply only to pizzas baked by processors for interstate sale through groceries or in restaurants which do not do their own baking.

Under current federal meat inspection regulations, pizzas made with meat must contain at least 15 per cent meat, but there is no standard for the cheese content. The proposed new standard would retain the 15 per cent meat minimum and add a new regulation requiring at least 12 per cent cheese.

"While most processors use about 12 per cent or more cheese in their product formulas—some use up to 20 per cent—the Agriculture Department has become aware that a few firms are starting to use less than 12 per cent cheese but more sauce, for example," a spokesman said.

Public comment on the pizza proposal will be accepted until Aug. 31, officials added.

Bridge

Sir Mordred foiled again

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Galahad the pure in spirit seldom got into the bridge games at the square table. He felt that card playing did not go well with the search for the Holy Grail.

At the same time, Galahad was too much of a gentleman to refuse to make up a game when he was needed and we find him sitting West in the "Siege Perilous."

The wily Mordred knew that Gawain's four-space bid denied possession of an ace or king. They didn't use artificial two-club bids in the days of King Arthur but they did follow the precepts of the sage Merlin Culbertson.

Mordred should have passed at four spades, but he had little respect for Galahad's bridge game and decided on a spot of deception. Hence, his five-diamond call.

The deception boomeranged right back in Mordred's face.

Galahad thought a while. After all you should always consider the lead against a slam as carefully as possible. dred's reputation for trickery and deceit and came to the conclusion that the five-diamond call was intended to stop a diamond lead.

Then he played his king of diamonds and another bit of Mordred villainy had been foiled.

Bellwether of scandal: Laird

By ELIZABETH WHARTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For clues on just how the White House will respond to the escalating pressures of the Watergate scandal, watch Melvin Laird.

That's the word being passed by Washington "insiders" —the politicians and columnists on both sides of the fence.

Laird is both an old-line political professional and an old and trusted friend of Richard Nixon's. He resigned a leadership position in the House of Representatives, against his wishes—and better judgment, to become Nixon's first Secretary of Defense in 1969.

He resigned at the end of Nixon's first term—as he had always said he would. A few months later, Republicans from all areas of the Party breathed a sigh of relief when he returned from private life, again reluctantly, to become Nixon's domestic chief of staff after top aides H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman were forced to resign in the spreading taint of Watergate.

Now these same Republicans are watching anxiously to see if Laird's recommendations to Nixon will be put into force.

They were encouraged that a decision apparently has been made to broaden White House contacts with Congress and with the Cabinet at Laird's behest; discouraged when Laird's recommendation that Press Secretary Ron Zeigler be allowed to resign was not only overruled but Zeigler was promoted to Presidential aide in addition to Press Secretary.

Moreover, the White House is still staffed with a sizeable number of second-and-third level officials and aides whose names have been linked in one connection or another with the Watergate affair. Their offenses may not have been indictable ones, but their continued presence seems to belie any real intention to "clean house" and rid the premises of any taint of the scandal.

Even more ominously, to the insiders, is the portent of the fact that Laird did not accompany Nixon on his current long work-and-rest vacation in San Clemente, although he has made several flying trips there. Despite pledges of a new openness in the Administration, Nixon continues to make his decisions in solitude.

This would seem to indicate that Nixon still feels he can weather the Watergate affair and emerge unscathed after it has run its course.

But he cannot. Whether or not the testimony of his former counsel John W. Dean III is believed, and whether or not corroboratory evidence is forthcoming to directly link Nixon to either the burglary or the cover-up, it is all but impossible to make an argument that leaves him untouched by responsibility in one form or another.

If, as he would have the public believe, he knew nothing of the conspiracy of his subordinates to hide all White House connection with the ugly sabotage and espionage represented by the Watergate break-in, then the question arises: Why, in Heaven's name, did he not?

More than nine months elapsed between the date of the Watergate arrests and March 21 this year, when Nixon announced that "new facts" had come to light prompting him to undertake a more extensive investigation.

During that nine months seven men had come to trial; five of them had pleaded guilty, all of them had been convicted, the federal judge who presided had spoken often and long of his feeling that perjury was being committed and that a cover-up was being preserved.

Also during that nine months, half a dozen major newspapers and newsmagazines, primarily the Washington Post and Time Magazine, had laid out in excruciating—and subsequently fully confirmed—detail the entire story of the Watergate incident and most of its ramifications.

And the White House had not only its own investigatory apparatus but the entire governmental investigatory agencies of the FBI and the Justice Department at its command. Surely they could have uncovered the same facts which two young reporters of the Washington Post uncovered, and in a fraction of the time.

Either Nixon got those facts, and ignored them; or he didn't want the facts and didn't request them. It is difficult to say which is the more reprehensible.

The only conceivable alternative, which he is reported willing to fall back on if necessary, is that his top aides Haldeman and Ehrlichman did get the facts, and lied to him about them. Yet if that is his defense, his continued isolation from outside contact is inexplicable.

Mel Laird is a loyalist, but he is also a realist—and he knows all of the facts and all of the arguments. He is known to believe that the only way the President can survive with any degree of either credibility or influence, is to—in his words— "go public": explain whatever errors of judgment were made, and demonstrate that the words "open White House" are more than just words.

Laird almost certainly will not remain on the staff unless those steps are taken. If, therefore, he stays, it will mean that the President is at least contemplating reforming his staff set-up and his administrative procedures.

If he leaves, it probably means it is time to put up the storm windows and batten down the hatches.

Former cabinet ministers jailed by Greek republic

ATHENS (UPI) — The government jailed two former cabinet ministers, a banker and a one-time legislator Tuesday, the latest in a long string of arrests following an abortive May 23 naval coup.

An official communique accused former Foreign Minister Evangelos Averoff of being a "political adviser" to the alleged conspirators and their link with ex-Premier Constantine Karamanlis, who lives in Paris.

The communique chargeed former Defense Minister Petros Garoufalias with "encouraging" the mutiny by making a $167,000 contribution to the conspirators.

Former Member of Parliament Constantine Aposkitis and banker Christos Aposkitis were arrested with the two former cabinet ministers and accused of aiding and abetting the May naval mutiny.

The Defense Ministry reported a total of 75 arrests up until Tuesday in connection with the attempted coup which led to the dethronement of King Constantine and the establishment of a republic in Greece.

Probe ordered in sterilization of possibly 11 girls

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — An immediate Justice Department investigation was ordered Tuesday into the operation of a federally funded birth control clinic which the Office of Economic Opportunity says has "involuntarily" sterlized as many as 11 minor girls.

Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson, reported by Justice Department sources as "upset" by the OEO reports, Ordered the Civil Rights Division to begin the investigation. He said he did not want to wait until the case came to him through regular govern ment channels.

Joseph Conklin, head of the Montgomery Community Action Committee, Inc. (MCAC), which is being sued for $1 million for the sterilization of two black Montgomery girls, denied the reports of 11 sterilizations as alleged by OEO Director Randal Teague.

Conklin said his records showed that eight persons had been sterilized under the MCAC's supervision in the last 16 months.

He said the eight were "definitely not all minors and definitely were not all of the same race."

"I have looked at our records...and have found only eight persons have been sterilized in the last 16 months," Conklin said. He would not reveal the ages of those eight or whether any minors in that group had their parents' knowledgeable consent.

Teague's disclosure came as the OEO temporarily restored the agency's $39,000 a month grant, pending the final outcome of an OEO probe launched last week after the suit was filed on behalf of the two girls, ages 12 and 14.

"I feel from the standpoint of liability we should look into this," said Richardson in Washington. "We shouldn't wait to be pushed—in a case like this we need to enhance confidence in the integrity of government."

Richardson said there was a possibility of civil liability which could result in a civil suit or possibly federal civil rights violations.

The attorney general said there may have been a failure on the part of the federal agency to understand people's rights, but there was na reason to think that sterlizations had occurred in other states.

An OEO spokesnan said it was illegal to use OEO funds for sterilization cases, and they were apparently not used in the Alabama cases where Medicaid funds were reportedly used.

Alabama authorities said there was no state law dealing with sterilizations.

The OEO temporarily withdrew the local agency's funds after OEO acting director Howard Phillips said the sterilizations of Minnie and Mary Alice Relf were illegal.

The $1 million suit filed on behalf of the Relf sisters said their illiterate mother thought she was authorizing her daughters to take more birth control shots when she signed a permission form, marking her "X" on the blank.

Attorneys for the girls claim Mrs. Relf and other mothers do not have the right to make decisions for their children's child-bearing.

Blacks face threat from new theories

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) —New theories being advanced in education may counter the progress blacks have made in the past 77 years and return the nation to a "separate but equal" doctrine, the executive director of the NAACP warned Tuesday.

Roy Wilkins, speaking at the national convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, warned of the threat from theories that blacks are inferior genetically and that formal education does not affect getting and holding any job.

Wilkins said the theories, advanced in respectable academic communities, are more of a threat to blacks' achieving Thomas Jefferson's version of equality than is what he called the racist application of "law and order" under the Nixon administration.

The theory on the genetic inferiority of blacks comes, not this time from the Ku Klux Klan, but from Dr. William Shockley of Stanford University, Wilkins said.

"Dr. Shockley maintains that Negroes are inherently and innately inferior to whites and that no matter what legislation is enacted, what opinions courts may have and what administrative policies are pursued, black Americans are just plain unable to cope —from their mothers' wombs," he said.

Wilkins said the theory may find its way into educational policy without being challenged.

"As eagerly as thousands of teachers and principals seized upon the idea that black children are ineducable, who can say that they would not embrace Shockley, unproven as the man may be?" Wilkins asked.

Military's schools said 'second-rate'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Congressman Leo J. Ryan said Tuesday that service academies at West Point, Annapolis and Colorado Springs were ineffective and unproductive.

But Ryan, a Democrat from South San Francisco, said the problem was not with the schools.

In a move reminiscent of Vietnam days, Ryan said the academies did not graduate "combat ready" officers.

Air Force Academy cadets "can't even learn to fly combat planes," Ryan said, adding that they only learned to fly small propeller-driven planes.

Ryan also said the Air Force Academy's failure to admit women was an "unconstitutional lack of change" in policy.

Earlier this year Ryan named Susan C. Sutphen, Baker City, as the principal candidate for the Air Force academy. Miss Sutphen was rejected by the academy for what Ryan said the Air Force said were "medical reasons."

Ryan said the Navy's promotion of a woman to head the Naval Service School in San Diego, which trains about 3,000 officers each a year, indicated the Navy thought she was qualified. He said he could not understand why women still should be denied entrance to the academies to get the kind of training she needs.

U.S. funds paid for 'phantoms'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Michael Harrington, D-Mass., said Tuesday information he has received shows at least $1 million, largely from U. S. aid funds, has gone to Cambodian army commanders to pay troops that did not exist. The commanders allegedly pocketed the overpayments.

Harrington said a General Accounting Office report he requested shows that "American officials in Washington and Phnom Penh have known about the payments to phantom troops since 1971 but have been unable to eliminate the practice."

"American officials acknowledged that they have been unable to prevent Cambodian Army unit commanders from inflating their payrolls and pocketing the pay of nonexistent soldiers," said Harrington.

"Recent estimates by a U.S. official in Cambodia reported that troop strength was padded by 10 to 15 per cent, amounting to almost $1 million in phantom pay in January, 1973," he said.

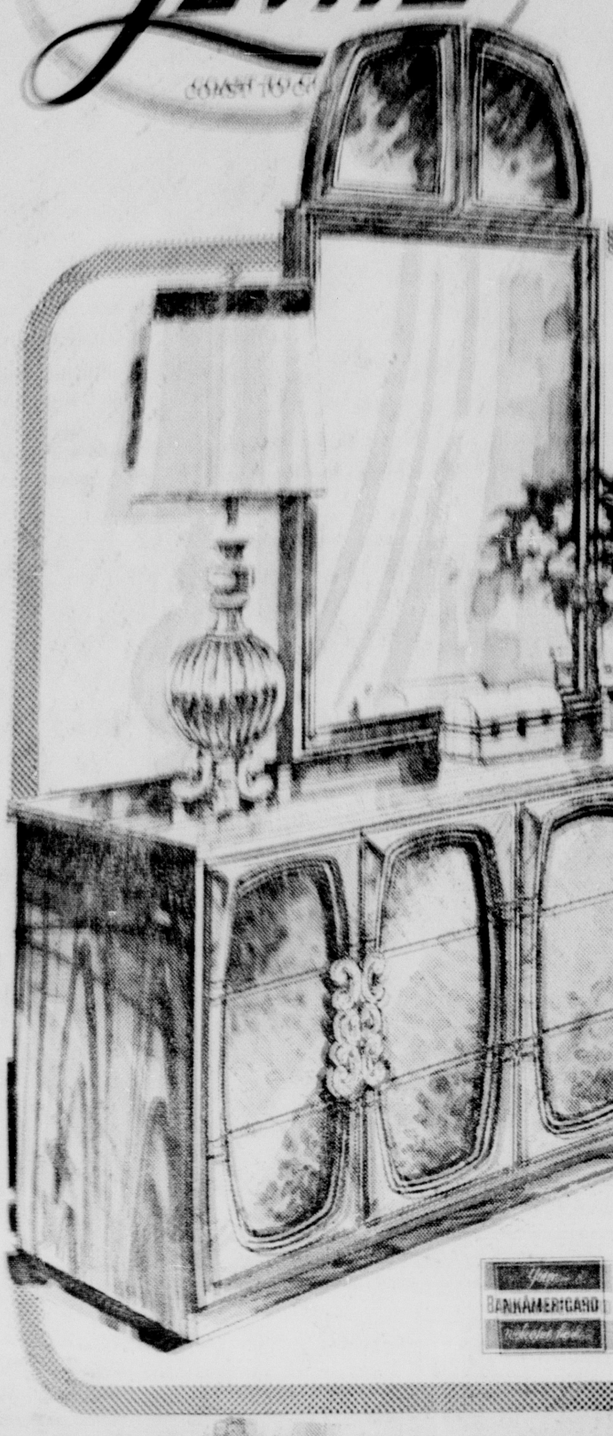

"Because U.S. funds in Cambodian currency are commingled with other assistance, the exact degree of U.S. contribution cannot be precisely determined" said Harrington.

The GAO report supports similar findings by investigators for the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on U.S. Commitments abroad, which also made the charge that U.S. aid money is paid for Cambodian soldiers who do not exist and added that the Central Intelligence Agency pays Laotian pilots not to fly combat missions.

The Senate subcommittee findings were reported last June by the Washington Post. Harrington said he requested the GAO investigation last December. He released the GAO report Friday but did not say how long ago he had received it.

No prior knowledge or skills are required to enroll in the course. The class will provide opportunities for direct experience. The fee is $32 for credit or $20 for no credit.

Automotive fundamentals II, a one-unit course designed for students who understand the basics of automotive systems, will cover more detailed and extensive systems and techniques. New policy

Fees will stand on city permits

POMONA — The City Council no longer will waive application fees for variances and conditional use permits.

This new policy of making all applicants pay was adopted by the City Council on the recommendation of the Planning Commission.

The council in the form of a resolution upheld a June 13 commission decision that the required fee accompaning the application for a variance or for a permit not be waived under any circumstances.

The council in the past has granted waivers and the commission in its recommendation said this system "for waiving fees for those organizations or individuals with the awareness to request the waiver" seemed inequitable and unfair.

Commissioners in their unanimous recommendation said city fees were minimal and set up to cover only the direct costs borne by the city in processing the necessary paper work for public hearings.

The commission noted that conditional use permit applications are often required from churches, clubs and other nonprofit organizations with limited funds but added that because many of these applicants "have little expertise" in making such applications, the staff often has to spend extra time in assisting.

The basic fee for a conditional use permit is $125 plus an additional $10 for each additional acre. The basic variance fee, for a single-family unit, is $25, and others, $120.

Citrus gets ASEA charter

AZUSA — Citrus College recently became the eighth California community college to receive a charter for a campus chapter of the American Society of Engineers and Architects. (ASEA)

The charter was presented to the college chapter recently by Robert Blumin, president of the society.

The chapter, which will begin operation this fall, is designed to help broaden and update the education of engineering and architectural students.

Dr. William T. Husung Jr., chairman of the college's industrial technology-engineering department, will be the club's adviser.

Rock program scheduled at Civic Center

POMONA — The Ages Past will set a precedent on Sunday, July 22, by becoming the first rock band permitted to play at the Civic Center Plaza by the City Council.

The council gave the go-ahead on the recommendation of Parks and Recreation Director Jack Hoxsey.

He noted that musical groups performing at Ganesha Park last year drew complaints from nearby residents and resulted in the adoption of a city ordinance requiring a permit when amplified musical instruments and drums were to be used.

Hoxsey said a committee of young persons would help with control and cleanup for the July 22 program at the plaza and that two policemen probably would be stationed there.

Two councilmen said that if the program passed without incident and was successful, that they would like to see similar groups perform at the plaza.

Organic foods program topic

POMONA — "Organic Gardening and the Food Crisis," will be discussed at the Pomona Public Library on Tuesday, by Ray Hutton of Claremont, long-time organic gardening enthusiast.

The program, in the library's public conference room, will start at 7:30 p.m.

Hutton is an expert in nursery and landscape management and is a student of the gardening methods of Sir Albert Howard and Rudolf Steiner.

Hutton's presentation will cover techniques of organic gardening, vegetables that can be grown in this area, soil improvement and coping with garden pests.

The program is open to the general public free of charge.

Roy Day elected to college post

POMONA — Roy O. Day, Pomona printing executive, has been elected to the board of governors of the James Madison Society of Claremont Men's College.

Day, also a member of the Pomona Board of Education, is one of 10 selected to guide the college support group.

The society is composed of area residents who have an interest in public affairs and who desire to participate in the activities of CMC. The society's main purpose is to support students majoring in political science and economics.

Church schedules blood bank

POMONA — A blood bank is scheduled Saturday and Sunday at Sacred Heart Catholic Church, Hamilton Boulevard and Grand Avenue.

Open to the public, the blood bank will be in operation from 1 to 4:30 p.m. both days. With a volunteer staff and equipment from the Pomona Red Cross, the blood bank will also operate with assistance from church members. Tom Scheuerell is chairman of the church-sponsored project.

Blood donors may make contributions to their own group blood bank if they wish or to the church blood bank. Donors must be between 18 and 65 and in good health.

This is the first time a blood bank has been conducted on a weekend in Pomona. While many appointments have been made in advance, an appointment is not required, Scheuerell said.

Walnut teacher gets assignment in Peace Corps

WALNUT — Jess Ohmert, head of the science department at Walnut High School, has accepted a two-year assignment with the Peace Corps in Ghana, Africa.

Ohmert and his wife Lucille, a chemistry and science teacher at Charter Oak High School, will both teach science in an African school. They attended an orientation session in Philadelphia before leaving for Africa.

The Walnut school board recently granted Ohmert an unprecedented two-year leave of absence. He teaches biology classes and a special honor science course at the high school.

Upland planner elects to retire

UPLAND — Thomas Lucero Jr., a planning commission member since 1969, has elected to retire rather than accept another four-year appointment on the commission.

Lucero, an equipment maintenance supervisor with General Telpehone in Baldwin Park, cited a heavy business schedule and other personal commitments as reasons for his decision not to accept reappointment.

The City Council, in accepting his retirement, passed a resolution, commending him for his years of service to the city.

Laird, Richardson set planning goal

One major activity of Elliot Richardson, the new Attorney General, and Melvin Laird, President Nixon's adviser on domestic affairs, will never make the headlines. Yet it perhaps will be the most important single contribution these dissimilar men make to government over the next few years.

When Richardson lets his hair down, insofar as this careful, precise man can, he says his objective in government is to bring more of the people working for him into the planning of what his agency does (a feed-in from the bottom up) and to help them work with an understanding of how their decisions and their actions affect the whole of the department (and the government). Laird is known to hold the same view.

Superficially, all this does not sound very dramatic. But in watching Washington these past 30 years this reporter is convinced that the great and most serious longtime problem of the federal government is that planning, more often than not, comes from the top down — and the middle and bottom are ignored.

Subordinates with long years of experience in the job, as contrasted with the in-now, out-tomorrow tenure of the top 3,000 men in government, are too often asked only to devise ways to implement plans already decided on.

This system fails to take advantage of the vast experience and considerable ability of many of the career men in government. (And there are sizable numbers of very able men and women — along with a quota of dunderheads.)

This practice also creates a tremendous morale problem. Capable men whose ideas are ignored with regularity gradually give up trying. They do their work but not with enthusiasm. They mark time. They resist change. And thus important sections of the vast federal bureaucracy inch along with great inefficiency, which belies what excellence is present in its membership.

Meanwhile bureaucrats build empires. Those devoted to one political philosophy or another with unfortunate frequency actively sabotage programs of superiors and administrations with which they disagree.

All this results in an enormous waste of talent, a subversion of plans and incredible inefficiency.

Now there is no doubt the administration voted into office has the right and duty (in cooperation with Congress) to make the decisions after the various plans and proposals are thoroughly argued. To have it otherwise would defeat the will of the voters.

But all too often a new administration, whether Democratic or Republican, will come into office so suspicious of the bureaucracy that a war then begins between the President's appointees and the career civil servants, a conflict which only ends when a new administration comes in — at which time a new battle begins.

This intermittent battling has resulted in vast mismanagement over the years of multibillion-dollar programs in welfare, health, education, defense, veterans aid, foreign assistance and trade. And sometimes even a needless breakdown or deterioration in our relationships with other nations.

New Viet hope?

It is tempting to minimize the effectiveness of the Paris communique agreed upon by North Vietnam and the United States, but at least one knowledgeable commentator considers it an adroit effort by Henry Kissinger, with some fairly reasonable possibility of easing the Vietnamese situation.

Joseph Alsop makes several interesting points. One is that while the new agreement merely reaffirms the accord on a cease fire, and one can never say Hanoi's promises will be faithfully kept, "you can at least say the promises are rather more likely to be kept if Hanoi has been willing to reaffirm them."

His second point is that the complex arrangements for divided authority in South Vietnam, on which that nation's future surely depends, can be successful only if the degree of intervention by North Vietnamese troops is kept at an acceptably low level. The Kissinger communique, again, reaffirms the earlier agreement on departure from Cambodia and Laos of all foreign troops, including North Vietnamese.

"Without an important North Vietnamese presence in Laos, particularly," Alsop says, "Hanoi is physically unable to support large scale intervention in South Vietnam." And Kissinger succeeded in getting Le Duc Tho, Hanoi negotiator, to specify an early date, July 1, for the start of North Viet troop withdrawals from Laos.

Fragile though these agreements are — and untrustworthy as North Vietnam is — they do offer some reason for hope. They would, that is, as Alsop points out, if it weren't for "the determination of the U.S. Senate to strike from the Nixon Administration all possible means of enforcing Hanoi's compliance with Hanoi's own promises."

Nixon interceded for Mrs. Stans

WASHINGTON — President Nixon personally arranged for hospitalization and treatment of Mrs. Maurice Stans at Walter Reed Army Medical Center more than a year after her husband resigned as Secretary of Commerce.

She has been hospitalized at the famed center on three occasions since Stans left the government to become the President's chief political fund-raiser. She stayed on even after Stans was indicted on May 10.

She was put up in a luxurious wing of Walter Reed where the Very Important Patients stay. For silver dinner service and all the accouterments of the finest hotels, plus her medical tests and drugs, she was charged only $61 a day.

Although high officials and their families are eligible for such service, it's highly unusual for the wife of a former cabinet member to be treated at Walter Reed.

She stayed at the hospital the last four months of 1972, then came back for another 19 days in January 1973. She returned again from May 8 to 22. Her visitors have included the First Lady and, on Thanksgiving, she received a telephone call from President Nixon.

Footnote: A hospital spokesman said the hospitalization was "a continuation" of treatment that Mrs. Stans received while her husband was still a cabinet member. Added Stans' personal secretary, Arden Chambers: "When Mr. Stans left office, one of the understandings was that Mrs. Stans would be permitted the courtesies of Walter Reed."

NIXON'S PROMISE: President Nixon has promised his new advisers that he'll change his habits and make himself more accessible.

Previously, he had remained in such splendid isolation that even Vice President Spiro Agnew had been unable to break through the palace guard with advice on Watergate.

The Vice President had tried to reach Nixon with urgent Watergate advice from several Republican senators. But Agnew had to report back last March that he couldn't get past H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, who were then the guardians of the presidential sanctum.

Their replacements, Melvin Laird and Bryce Harlow, still haven't been taken into the President's deep confidence. They didn't even accompany him to San Clemente, where he pondered his Watergate course in his usual solitude.

The President has pledged, however, a new open-door policy. He is taking phone calls, for example, from important senators who used to be unable to get through to him.

Those who have spoken to him about Watergate tell us he is both hurt and annoyed by the Senate revelations. They insist, however, that the President shows no sign of desperation. He doesn't intend to resign nor does he expect to be impeached. He believes the Watergate episode eventually will diminish, in contrast with his diplomatic achievements.

He swears to his friends that he had no part in the Watergate break-in nor the illegal coverup. "I'm not stupid," one visitor quoted him as saying. "If I had known about the skulduggery, I'd have fired those people." He claims he was deceived by people he trusted.

AMA'S PRICE FIXING: The American Medical Association, whose journal draws heavy income from drug ads and whose pension fund has $10 million in drug stocks, has refused an ad for a guide to drug prices.

The book, Physician's Guide to Prescription Prices, gives doctors and consumers comparative costs of drugs. The drug firms that advertise in the AMA Journal oppose comparative pricing because it helps doctors prescribe safe, inexpensive drugs instead of the same product sold with fancy trade names at fancy prices.

In trying to explain why it turned down the ad, the AMA told the book's publishers "we would not presume to encourage efforts to 'fix' prices . . ." Actually, by refusing the ad, the AMA has done just that: Comparative pricing is one way to stop price fixing

BRUCE BIOSSAT

Sees presidential power too great

One great lesson we are supposed to draw from President Johnson's conduct of the Vietnam war and the Nixon administration's Watergate affair is that presidential power today is too great and is almost certain to be abused.

But there is about this judgment an air of inevitability which I think we should distrust. Doctrines founded in rigid certitude seldom apply so precisely to human behavior — in politics or anything else.

George Reedy, once press secretary to Lyndon Johnson, voices the judgment on presidential power in his newest book, "The Presidency in Flux." A key quotation:

"Power breeds isolation. Isolation leads to the capricious use of power. In turn, the capricious use of power breaks down the normal channels of communication between the leader and the people whom he leads."

Obviously, Reedy believes there is an inescapable progression at work, once the idea of a great concentration of power is accepted.

Since presidential power has in fact been growing, at least since Franklin Roosevelt's time, that part comes easy.

It may be more questionable whether isolation follows inevitably. Mr. Nixon is of course famed for his isolation. But he appears to have lived that way most of his adult life.

Mr. Johnson, for all his midnight calls to favored advisers and his personal cajoling of lawmakers and bureaucrats, seems also to have been seriously isolated from the people at large.

Yet FDR, who really started the latest upward bound in presidential power, did not live and work in similar isolation, though his physical crippling perhaps gave him more excuse.

He did indeed sometimes use his great power capriciously, as biographers like James MacGregor Burns point out convincingly. Yet it would be difficult to demonstrate that this capriciousness seriously affected the channels of communication he had developed with the people. In fact, FDR has for years been cast up as a model of the presidential communicator.

Presidential power surely did not diminish under Presidents Truman, Eisenhower and Kennedy. All three at times used that power arbitrarily, if not capriciously. Gen. Eisenhower usually is thought of as a low-key power wielder, but he did not hesitate to land troops in Lebanon when he perceived a threat to peace in the Middle East.

Without blinking an eye, John Kennedy sent 3,500 soldiers to the Thai-Laotian border when Laos was seen to be tottering.

Yet, again, it is hard to argue that any of these three was peculiarly isolated from the people they sought to lead.

It is doubtful presidential power is going to be seriously reduced in an era when swelling numbers of Americans want action, and can't get it from a debilitated Congress or the glacial mess of their governmental bureaucracy.

But history does not suggest that isolation is a rigid consequence of such power. Nor should we blithely accept the idea it will often be used capriciously (or wrongly, as in Watergate.) Human behavior is too variable.

And, even if there is capriciousness, FDR is proof that it need not gravely cripple a president's power to lead the people well.

Misleading article

An article that appeared in the June 27, 1973, edition of the Progress-Bulletin, section C-8 was very misleading. The article was captioned, HAM OPERATOR PENALIZED FOR FOOTBALL GAME INTERFERENCE. In the first paragraph of the article it was stated that an Amateur radio operator in San Jose had been convicted in Federal court of using the citizen's band illegally and interfering with a neighbor's television set.

A little investigation on my part uncovered that the article, released by UPI in San Francisco, was written by San Jose correspondent, Dick Harnett. I spoke with Mr. Harnett on the telephone and discovered that the radio operator in San Jose was not a ham radio operator, but just a common "citizen's band bootlegger" that operates with a fictitious name instead of legally issued call letters. Mr. Harnett also indicated to me that he had tried to be careful to make it clear that the guilty party was not a ham radio operator. In the article, however, Mr. Harnett used the expression "Amateur radio operator" in error. It was his intention to use the dictionary definition of "Amateur" to describe the bootlegging actions of the citizen's band operator. As it came out in print, the expression placed the guilty party into a group of amateur radio or ham radio operators which he obviously did not belong.

The headline or caption was derived from the first paragraph of the UPI article by the Progress-Bulletin staff. This caption just added to the confusion.—Richard Shyer, WB6BRC, Pomona.

INSIDE REPORT

Laird copes with Haldeman ghosts

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — Although M lvin R. Laird's success as President Nixon's White House domestic chief depends on his ability to dominate the staff left over from the discredited Haldeman-Ehrlichman regime, he is encountering ominous resistance to change.

The prize exhibit is Frederick Malek, one of H. R. Haldeman's most trusted and confidential aides and deputy director of the Committee to Reelect the President (CRP). Malek told us openly and candidly he had every intention of staying on as No. 2 man in the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for at least another year.

Malek was Haldeman's personnel chief for the entire Nixon administration befire moving to CRP last summer. Immediaely after the election, Haldeman and then White House domestic chief John Ehrlichman installed Malek as top deputy in OMB.

A self-made millionaire, Malek exemplifies the hard-nosed Haldeman lieutenants so feared and hated throughout the Nixon administration. Even though Malek has thus far escaped any Watergate taint, his key job at CRP combined with his Haldeman link puts him near the top of the White House house cleaning list that key Republicans have drafted.

Carried dangerous implications

Malek's frank acknowledgement that he has no intention of quitting his powerful policy post, despite the fall of Haldeman and Ehrlichman and the near ruin of President Nixon, is symbolic of the standfast strategy of the pre-Laird White House staff. For Laird, it carries dangerous implications that the President himself may have given his blessing to the standfast strategy.

When Laird told the Washington Post last Wednesday that replacement of Ron Ziegler as presidential press secretary was one of "certain changes" necessary in the White House staff, the San Clemente White House immediately contradicted him. A "spokesman" (probably Ziegler himself) was authorized by Mr. Nixon to say Ziegler would stay on, and that the President disagreed with Laird that Ziegler's usefulness had been impaired by the Watergate scandals.

The next day, the insult was deepened when deputy press secretary Gerald Warren, Laird's choice for Ziegler's job, said: "Laird was expressing some personal views."

This long-distance, public disagreement between Laird, the enormously influential Republican leader with powerful credentials in Congress, and the President's pre-Watergate White House aides is foreboding because of what it may suggest about the President himself: Mr. Nixon does not now have, and never had, the slightest intention of changing the ways of his White House staff or his own ways.

To the growing number of congressional Republican critics of Mr. Nixon, it hints, furthermore, that Laird was taken on for public relations reasons alone, for cosmetic but not real change.

Loyalists in key spots

If so, the struggle between Laird and Bob Haldeman's ghosts will soon be dominating the Nixon administration, with Laird's tenure as White House domestic chief dependent on the result. Haldeman-Ehrlichman loyalists occupy sensitive spots in the White House, such as Malek's old post as administrative personnel chief, now held by Jerry Jones, considered a Haldeman man.

Scores of top-level aides, some in the White House and some placed by Malek at Haldeman's orders in strategic spots in every department and agency, have political, ideological and personal ties to the ousted Ehrlichman-Haldeman regime. They were Haldeman's government-wide eyes-and-ears.

These include Lawrence Higby and Bruce Kehrli, who had immense power as Haldeman's two top aides and still continue to wield it in the Laird White House. So does Richard Howard, deputy to departed special counsel Charles W. Colson (chief political adviser to Mr. Nixon during the Watergate era.

With Haldeman and Colson gone, the residual power of such aides would be zero once Laird takes hold—unless the President chooses to throw his mantle of protection over them as he has done for Ziegler. Without that mantle, they will soon be gone. With it, they may stay—and Mel Laird may be gone.

Power of staff holdovers

Some thoughtful presidential aides suspect the remarkable Watergate Memorandum submitted last week to the Senate committee concentrated on the defense of Haldeman and Ehrlichman rather than the President, thus reflecting the power of Haldeman-Ehrlichman staff holdovers. That is sufficient reason, they feel, for their quick departure.

But beyond that, the ghosts symbolize the danger of bloated White House power, unprecedented in peacetime history, and the Watergate scandal. Laird's purpose — to strip the White House of its overcentraliized power mechanisms and to clean out that stench of Watergate—would be wholly beyond reach without any antiseptic housecleaning.

La Verne planners slate hearing on general plan

By BOB NAGEY
P-B Staff Writer

LA VERNE — Residents here will get an idea of what the city will look like in the future when the Planning Commission holds a public hearing next Tuesday night on its updated general plan of growth.

The hearing, required by state law, is scheduled to start at 7:30 p.m. in the chambers of the City Council.

Planning Director Charles Le Gros urged all residents with a concern for the future to attend and voice their feelings.

Although the law calls for only one public hearing each by the Planning Commission and the City Council, Le Gros said he expected the Planning Commission sessions to continue for several sessions during the month.

"We have a lot to cover," he explained. "I seriously doubt we can get it all done in one or two nights."

The updated plan which revamps one adopted by the council 10 years ago, sets out community goals pertaining to land use, open space, recreation and community design.

Under land use, it furnishes a tentative blue print on zoning, including proposals as to where residential, commercial and manufacturing developments should go, where the city should require open space and acquire land for parks, where schools are expected to go, and what should be the place for multiple dwelling developments such as apartments.

Under community developments, the general plan calls for an over-all Early California motif on all construction, except residential, with open courtyards and verandas.

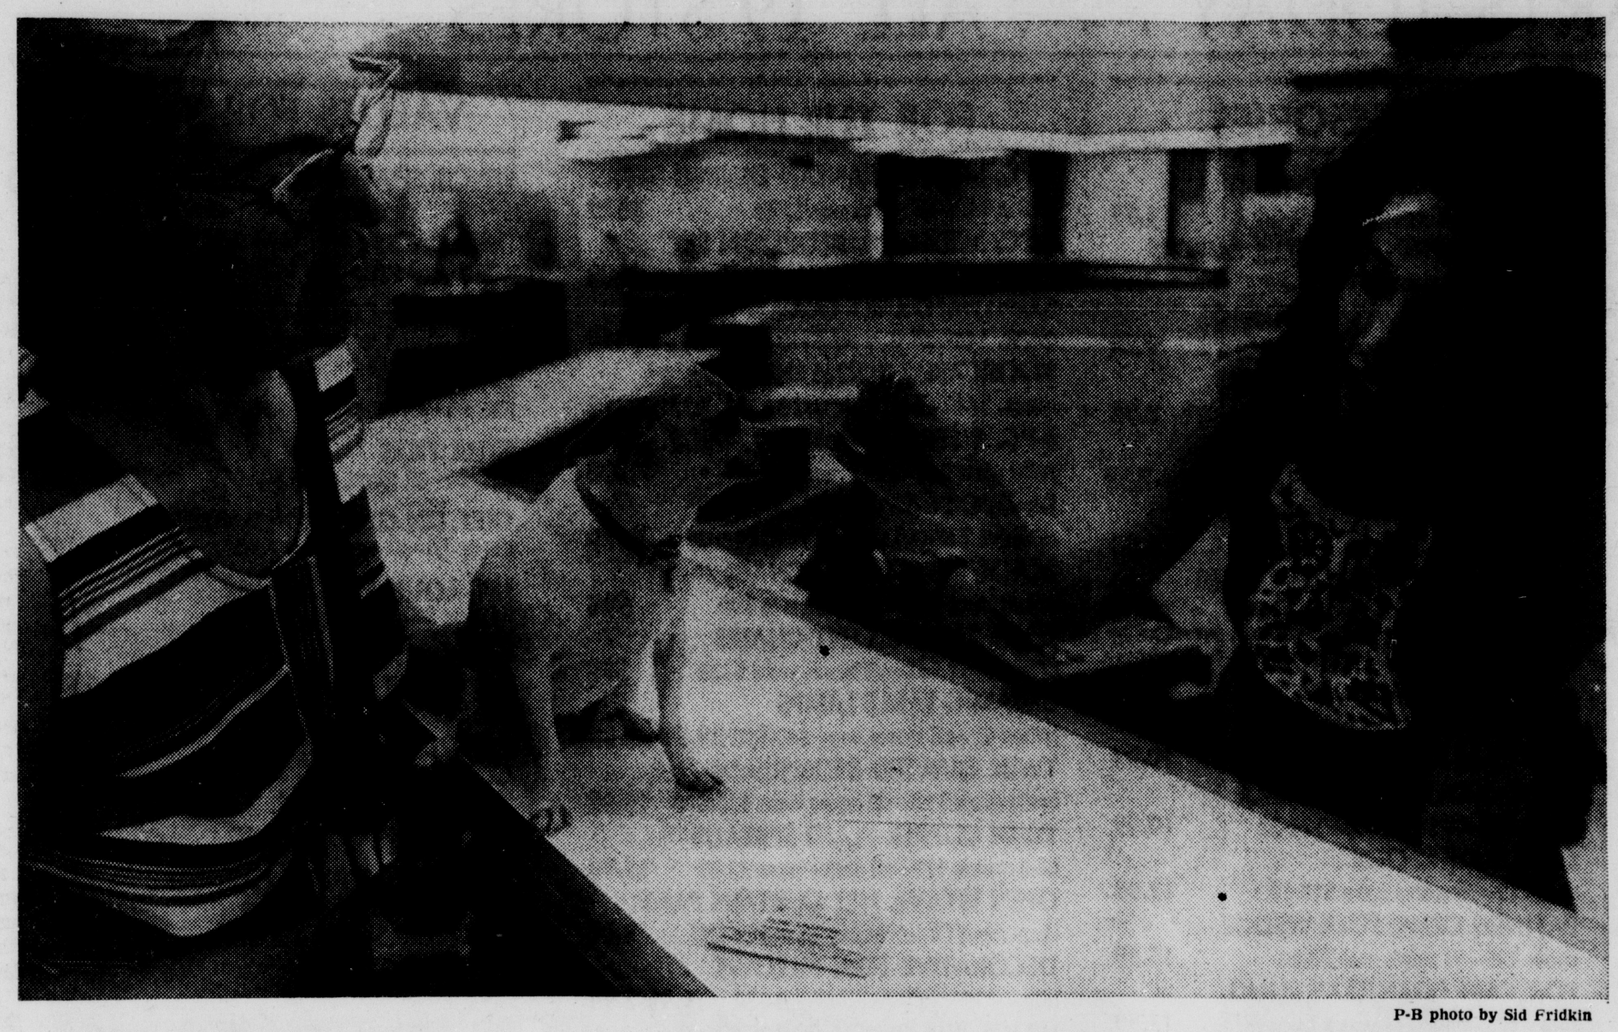

A large map will accompany the 70-page text that will describe the general plan. Le Gros said there are still some copies of the text available to the public at the city hall.

He emphasized that the plan as presented is tentative, "subject to revision and amendment," and represents "the best efforts" of the planning staffs as well as the Planning and Parks and Recreation commissions and the Commission on Environmental Quality.

However, he pointed out, there is a strong likelihood that as the public questions the proposals there will arise the need for a number of changes. He said those changes, if approved by the Planning Commission, would be passed onto the the City Council.

He said the meeting would begin with a summary of what the updated general plan intends to accomplish. This will be followed by questions and answers. If interest continues, the hearings would be carried over to subsequent evenings.

Public hearings also are to be held by the City Council after the Planning Commission makes its final recommendations.

Bowers returned as president of Bonita board

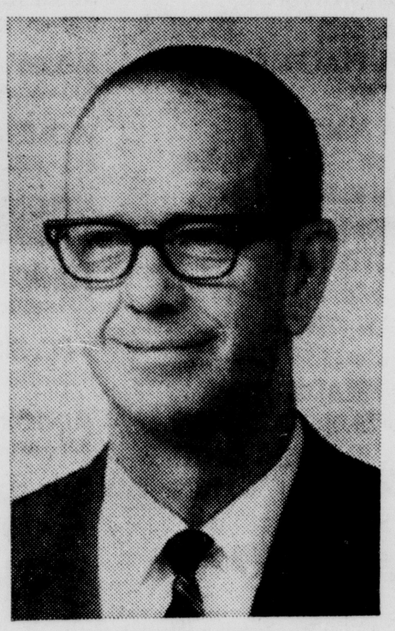

SAN DIMAS — A. Eugene Bowers was re-elected president of the Bonita school board at its annual organizational meeting this week.

Bowers, an executive with the Metropolitan Water District, was elected for the third consecutive school year to the post.

The board also re-elected A. Robert Rimpau, vice president, and Anton R. Dyck, clerk.

In other action, the board approved a cooperative recreation agreement with the cities of La Verne and San Dimas. Under the agreement, the school district will provide recreational facilities, with personnel and supervision to be furnished by the cities.

The lease on the building which houses the district's continuation school was renewed on a month-to-month basis. The lease originally expired June 30, but had to be renewed when completion of the new school building was set back to December.

10 P.V. cities split $382,000 tax rebates

State Controller Houston Flournoy announced the distribution of more than $382,000 to 10 Pomona Valley area cities as the June shares of highway users, cigarette taxes and vehicle license fees.

The three sources resulted in monthly apportionments totaling $5,643,057 and $759,241, for the governments of Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties, respectively.

From the June apportionment of highway users taxes, $16,035,478 went directly to the counties, $12,036,260 to cities, $37,295,233 for expenditures on state highways, and $30,000 to the bicycle lane account.

The toal was derived from the following sources: gasoline tax, $58,027,187; diesel fuel tax, $4,553,463; transfer from the transportation tax fund, $2,813,814; and miscellaneous, $2,507.

Local communities received the following amounts:

Pomona, $66,973; Ontario, $44,910; Claremont, $19,370; Industry, $942; La Verne, $12,151; San Dimas, $13,447; Walnut, $4,965; Montclair, $15,769; Upland, $24,046; and Chino, $15,293.

The June apportionment of cigarette tax sent $1,288,276 to the 58 counties with the cities sharing $5,462,758.

This distribution represents 30 per cent of the revenue depostied in the cigarette tax fund during the month of May less the state's administrative costs of $23,075.

The 10 valley cities recieved the following:

Pomona, $32,831; Ontario, $20,204; Claremont, $6,009; Industry, $13,393; La Verne, $3,588; San Dimas, $4,146; Walnut, $1,251; Montclair, $10,671; Upland, $10,107; and Chino, $6,164.

Distribution of $6,043,535 was made to cities and counties as the June apportionment of state-collected "in-lieu" motor vehicle license fees, making a total of $252,365,866 apportioned during fiscal year 972-73.

Half of the June distribution went to the cities and half to counties in the proportion that the population of each city or county bear to the population of all the cities or counties in the state.

Shares for the area's cities were:

Pomona, $16,950; Ontario, $12,455; Claremont, $4,727; Industry, $135; La Verne, $2,929; San Dimas, $3,251; Walnut, $1,138; Montclair, $4,300; Upland, $6,616; and Chino, $4,167.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The purpose of the temperature-humidity index (THI) is to measure or estimate human discomfort in the summertime from the combined effects of temperature and humidity, The World Almanac says. The THI is calculated by adding wet bulb and dry bulb temperature readings, multiplying the sum by 0.4 and adding 15. A THI of 80 is quite uncomfortable.

Variety, but same results

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government has several nice ways to say it when someone is fired.

President Nixon said when he dismissed his White House counsel, John W. Dean III earlier this year that Dean's resignation was "requested and accepted." Unwanted employes at the State Department are "selected out."

Monday, William E. Colby, the director-designate of the CIA, came up with another term. He told a Senate committee considering his appointment that the CIA was looking for employes who don't fit in and "arranging a situation where they can be helped to leave government service early."

Fewer job applicants, says CIA; not so, say FBI and SS

WASHINGTON (UPI — The Central Intelligence Agency has received fewer applications for employment since the Watergate scandal erupted, but the FBI and the Secret Service report applications on the upswing.

A spokesman for the CIA said Monday there has been a slight "but clearly discernible" decline in the number of formal applications for employment received by that agency during the past few months.

He said, however that it was too early to tell whether it reflected any disenchantment on the part of young people with government intelligence operations because of the Watergate case or simply reflected changing employment conditions in some parts of the country.

Both the CIA and the FBI have come under criticism during the Watergate investigation, particularly the latter for failing to investigate thoroughly enough the subsequent events after the break-in and bugging of the Democratic National Committee June 17, 1972. The FBI also has suffered an internal upheaval since the death of its only director, J. Edgar Hoover, in 1972 and the resulting effort to find an acceptable replacement.

"We haven't noticed any decline in employment at the FBI," a spokesman said. "Of the 8,700 agents we employ there is an average turnover of 300 agents a year. There have always been about 30 applications for every agent's slot and there still are."

A spokesman for the Secret Service said "there is no reason to think the Watergate has hurt our enrollment." He said turnover among the agents hired to guard the President and other top federal officials is minimal.

"We maintain a continual waiting list of more than 100 prosspective agents every year," he said. The Secret Service has 1,227 agents based in its 62 field offices around the country with a total employment of 2,800 including clerical and administrative staffs.

A CIA spokesman said that formal applications, in the past, have been subject to regional employment conditions which affect large numbers of personnel.

Whether this was the case in the present decline, which began in March has not been subjected to statistical studies which would allow firm conclusions, the spokesman said.

The CIA spokesman said that, in general, recruiters for the agency had found for several years that college students were being drawn into into the ghettos and inner cities to work. The FBI also said it had encountered recruitment problems among college students who are drawn to private business because of large salary prospects.

The FBI spokesman said recruiting in all security operations.

"The lure of becoming an international spy or an FBI agent involved in cops and "the glamour aspect" affects robbers always is a bigger come-on that the possibility of fulfilling a clerical or administrative job," an FBI agent said. There are 11,500 clerical jobs at the FBI.

N. Viet official loses job in flood threat

SAIGON (UPI) — What do you do in North Vietnam when there is a major flood threat and the dikes are not getting built?

Answer: Fire the minister of water conservation and replace him with the man who first pointed out the trouble.

On June 14, Radio Hanoi announced that Ha Ke Tan, minister of water conservation and a member of the Communist Party Central Committee, had been removed from office and assigned a job supervising construction of a dam on the Black river.

The broadcast said Tan was replaced by Nguyen Thanh Binh, director of the State Inspection Commission and an alternate member of the Central Committee.

The reason for the change remained a mystery until three days later, when North Vietnam's largest newspaper, Nhan Dan (People's Daily), published a summary of a report of Binh's Inspection Commission. It detailed the inadequacies of the flood control system supervised by Tan.

But the imperative necessity for the change did not become apparent until the following day, June 18, when the north Vietnamese Army newspaper, Quan Doi Nhan Dan (People's Army Daily), published an account of an imminent flood and typhoon threat.

The newspaper ordered military commanders to begin planning for emergency evacuation of the people, establishment of dike patrols and general security precautions.

The army newspaper also warned military commanders to be alert for attempts to sabotage the dike system by "our enemies."

The typhoon season in the South China sea normally begins in July and continues through October, similar to the Atlantic ocean hurricane season.

Indians grope for identity, dignity

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "The only good Indian I ever saw were dead" was the way Gen. Philip Sheridan put it. The phrase later was honed into "The only good Indian is a dead Indian."

Although Sheridan's attitude in 1868 was not shared by most white Americans, it nevertheless provides insight into the way the natives of both North and South America were regarded and treated by the European immigrants to the Western Hemisphere.

The Europeans regarded the Indians as inferiors with few rights, as heathens to be evangelized to Christianity and the white man's way of life, as savages whose lands could be taken.

And they were to be killed if all else failed, or sometimes killed with flimsy excuse or no excuse at all.

The white man's attitude finally was summed up in the "Manifest Destiny" doctrine in frontier America that said the white man was ordained by destiny to rule the continent.

Under that doctrine, Indians were slaughtered, robbed of their lands and eventually subdued and relegated to reservations, their culture and their pride all but destroyed.

The "Indian problem" still is with the nation today. The federal government retains trusteeship over the country's nearly half million reservation Indians and maintains a "special relationship" to them and the more than 300,000 urban Indians living off reservations.

For the most part, Indians have clung to their tribal life, refusing to melt into white society. But poverty, alcoholism, suicide and other social problems dog Indians as they stumble through modern America as wards of the white man's government.

After nearly a century of dormancy, however, some Indians are beginning to reawaken a sense of pride in their race, and to demand a redress of grievances.

This resurgence led to the seizure of the government's Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) in Washington last year by the militant American Indian Movement (AIM); and to the 71-day takeover by AIM this year of the South Dakota hamlet of Wounded Knee, site in 1890 of the last big massacre of Indians by Army troops.

No one knows what lies ahead for Indians, but the Indians themselves are only too aware of their history and their treatment by the Europeans who settled their land.

After Columbus discovered America, the Spaniards debated how to treat the inhabitants of the New World. The hard-liners, calling for subjugation, won out despite pleas by dissenters to recognize the prior claims by the natives to the land and their right to refuse to adopt the white man's ways.

With the Crusades to the Holy Land in Medieval times as a precedent, the Catholic Spaniards, armed with a Papal Bull ordering conversion of the Indians by force if necessary, set out not only to colonize but also to Christianize the New World. At the same time, they claimed its gold and exploited its other resources.

Wilcomb E. Washburn, director of American studies at the Smithsonian Institution, concluded that the root of all alleged justification for European settlement and conquest of the New World was "the assumption that Christians and Christianity had both a moral right and legal authority to overspread the world."

With this imperialistic approach, conflicts and wars with the natives were inevitable. But the Indians and their arrows were no match for the Spanish guns.

The mostly Protestant English, in colonizing North America, to a large extent inherited the Spanish approach, although they were not as aggressive in evangelism.

The first English settlers were met by friendly Indians who were helpful hosts. But the white man's haughty manner and his greed for the Indians' land and food soon turned white-Indian relations to conflicts and war.

Outnumbered by the Indians, the settlers first used the prudent approach of negotiations for land cessions from the natives. But as their numbers grew, the settlers turned to force and coercion.

The system of assigning Indians to reservations and of government regulation of commerce and land dealings with Indians began in colonial America. That precedent is followed to this day.

As the years passed many Indian tribes disappeared, either through annihilation, disease or assimilation into white society. Other tribes were pushed westward.

The Northwest Ordinance of 1787 established the basic policy that, as an ideal, has governed U. S. treatment of Indians since. But this paternalistic policy has not always been followed.

The ordinance said "the utmost good faith shall always be observed towards the Indians; their land and property shall never be taken from them without their consent; and in their property rights and liberty they shall never be invaded or disturbed, unless in just and lawful wars authorized by Congress; but laws founded in justice and humanity shall from time to time be made for preventing wrongs being done to them and for preserving peace and friendship with them."

Under this "them and us" approach, the fledgling United States regarded the Indian

I'm so inundated with television that I watched the Watergate hearings for three days before I realized it wasn't the "Secret Storm."

Not my husband. "Are those reruns?" he asked suspiciously.

"Of what?" I asked.

"Of last July's six o'clock news."

"Don't be ridiculous. News hasn't gone into reruns yet."

"Everything else has," he grumbled. "I've just seen 'Leave it to Beaver' go from maturity back to puberty. And 'The Waltons' just wished me Merry Christmas."

You're just crabby because you can lip-sync all the segments of 'McHale's Navy.'"

"I am crabby because my whole life is just one fat rerun."

"What are you talking about?"

"Every morning on the elevator, the same recording says the same dumb thing, 'Move to the back of the car and face the door.'

"My secretary, when she is in, is a rerun of the 1930s . . . red lipstick, wedgies and puffed sleeves. I plug in the dictaphone and am treated to 30 minutes of what I said yesterday.

"At lunch, I hear Sam tell me the same joke he's been telling me for the last eight years . . . you know the one about the midget and the talking dog who asked to stay the night at the home of the farmer with the beautiful daughter . . ."

"I remember," I nodded.

"Sometimes I think I am going crazy. Old books are being reissued with sexy covers to fool me into thinking they're current. Broadway is going crazy with nostalgic old plays. And the other day I called my office and a recording of my own voice told me I was out and wouldn't be in until Wednesday at three. What are we having for dinner?"

"The same thing we had last night only submerged in a cheese sauce."

"I knew it!" he barked. "More reruns."

He slumped into a chair and turned on the TV set.

Minutes later, I asked, "What's on?"

"Shhh," he said excitedly, "It's Cincinnati playing Oakland in the '72 World Series. Now watch the stop action . . . here it is in slow motion . . .now the isolated camera shot . . . and again on the split screen."

I slipped the leftovers swimming in cheese sauce under his nose. "Don't think of this as a rerun,' I coaxed, "but as an instant replay."

Indians seeking identity, dignity

tribes as foreign nations, although living in U. S. territory, and negotiated treaties with them to settle differences and to get cessions of land from the Indians.

The 1887 Allotment Act was aimed at breaking up the Indian reservations by alloting individual tracts to each Indian family and selling the rest of the reservations. Although this process was never completed, 90 million acres of land passed from the Indians before the 1934 Indian Reorganization Act restored recognition of the tribal system and the reservations.

By then, there were only 48 million acres left, and Washburn said, "a way of life had been smashed, a value system destroyed" for the Indians.

After World War II, government policy again shifted and became "termination" of its "special relationship" to the Indians —in other words, the Indian would have to make his own way in society. Proponents claimed it would set the Indian free.

But the Indians opposed ending the trust relationship, and experience under the termination policy showed Indians worse off than before, often the victims of white manipulation and exploitation.

President Nixon reversed this policy in 1970 by renouncing termination in favor of retaining government trusteeship over Indians and increasing federal spending on Indian programs.

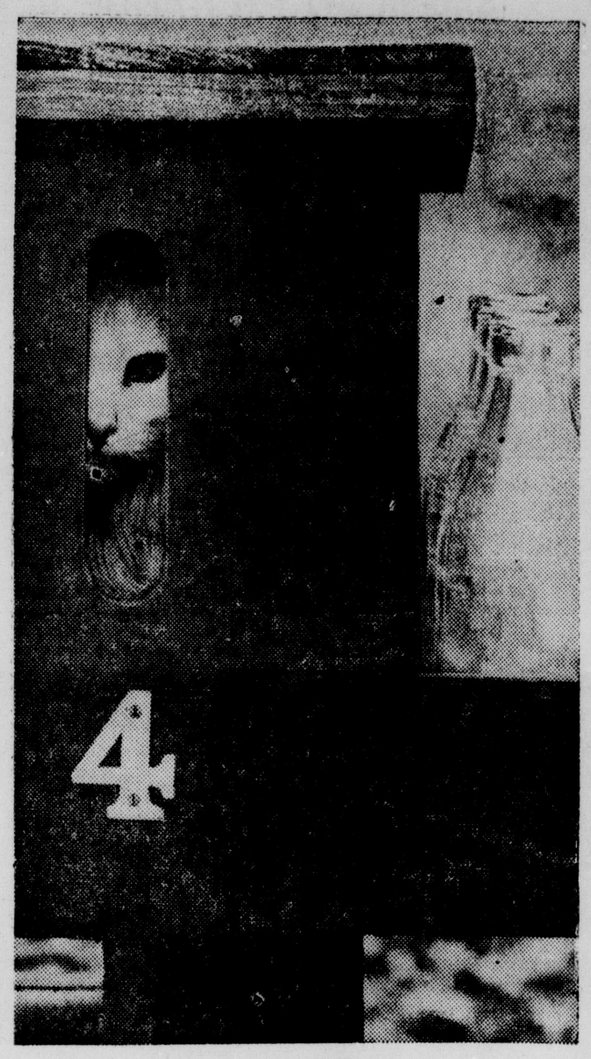

Despite the BIA and Wounded Knee takeovers by AIM, this remains the government policy today, along with efforts to permit Indians more control of the government programs that affect them.

The nation has come a long way since Civil War hero Sheridan, commander of Army troops fighting Indians in the West in 1868, made his famous statement in rebuking a surrendering Comanche Indian named Tosawi who said in broken English, "Tosawi, good Indian."

Although Americans no longer slaughter Indians as Sheridan's troops did at times, the "Indian problem" has not gone away or been solved.

Though treatment is more tender in most respects, Indians remain alienated.

Descendants of the once proud tribes are groping to find their identity and their niche in the modern world.

Butz says price freezes, controls 'self-defeating'

KENANSVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz Monday night criticized price freezes and artificial controls as "self defeating."

"Consumer pressures have forced the administration to freeze retail food prices temporarily," Butz told a meeting of Young Republicans. "But some of us feel a price freeze is self defeating in the long run."

Butz said consumers will demand changes to increase food supplies even with higher prices when they understand the economic facts of life.

"I think consumers just don't understand these things," said Butz. "But when they do, they will be the first to demand conditions which will increase food supplies and bring prices into line."

He said consumer demand for food priced near the current cost of production or below was forcing cattlemen and other food producers to curtail production.

"Their alternative is to produce at no profit or at a loss," he said. "That's the part that's really self defeating."

Butz said "most consumers would prefer adequate food at moderate prices rather than have low prices but no food on grocery shelves to buy."

He said "increases in human and industrial productivity must remain one of our top priorities if we're going to assure continued economic growth."

Anti-war group says government set up break-in

NEW YORK (UPI) — The War Resisters League, whose offices were broken into in 1969, said Monday that it suspected the federal government was responsible for the break-in. It said, however, it had no evidence of that.

When the league offices were ransacked May 9, 1969, mailing lists and stencils were stolen and office equipment was wrecked.

"At the time we thought it was the work of some rightwing extremist group," said league Chairwoman Irma Zigas. "However, in light of the disclosures of the illegal raids ordered by the White House we have good reason to suspect the government was behind the raid."

The league however, said it had no hard evidence to back up its suspicions, and that its charge was based on "intimation."

During the 1960s, the league organized several antiwar protests.

Mighty Padres too much for Dodgers

Dodgers first baseman Steve Garvey competes with a couple of fans in his effort to snag a foul ball hit by San Diego's Dave Winfield. Neither Garvey nor the fans were able to catch the ball.

Lefthanders have picnic against L.A.

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — Walter Alston sat in his office in the Dodger clubhouse glumly munching a sandwich.

The writers had shuffled in for the post game post mortem like a group of palbearers on their way to a funeral.

No one seemingly dared to break the silence waiting instead for the Dodger manager to voice his thoughts unsolicited. Finally he spoke.

"Were those (two) runs in the ninth inning earned?", he asked.

Happily, they were, the first earned runs the Angelenos had scored in the two games of the series played so far with the lowly San Diego Padres.

"I'll say one thing," he mumbled into his sandwich. "That young fellow knows where to put the ball."

The "young fellow" referred to was Rich Troedson, a 23-year old lefthander who was the winning pitcher as the slumping Dodgers succumbed to the Padres, 4-2, on an otherwise warm and lovely July Fourth evening.

The loss was the fifth straight, making this the longest losing streak of the season. Last year they twice had five-game loss strings. Their lead over the second-place Giants now has shrunk to 3½ games.

"We had to hit a spell like this," continued Alston. "I'd just as soon it happens now instead of in September. Our trouble is the result of a combination of things, the long games on the road, we're a little tired, and we're in a slump."

There is also the incontestable fact that despite being a predominantly righthanded hitting club, the 1973 team has a terrible time with lefthanders.

The Dodgers have lost 15 of 28 against the portsiders while winning 38 of 55 against righthanders.

Troedson, a 6-1, 170 pounder from Palo Alto, had played only 15 games of professional baseball (with Tri-Cities) before going to spring training as a non-roster player this year.

He became the second rookie lefthander in two nights to defeat the Dodgers impressively. Tuesday night, Randy Jones, who was not with the Padres this spring, stopped them on four hits.

Troedson was almost as tough until he weakened in the ninth inning. Even then a pair of errors contributed to his difficulties. Prior to that he had handcuffed the Dodgers on five hits through eight innings. He retired the first nine Dodgers in order and allowed only three balls to be hit out of the infield in the first six innings.

Meanwhile, the Padres had taken a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning on Dave Roberts' solo home run, Nate Colbert's second double of the game, a long fly by Clarence Gaston, and a squeeze bunt by Fred Kendall.

Losing pitcher Al Downing (6-4) fielded the bunt and appeared to have a play at the plate, but his underhand toss to catcher Steve Yeager dribbled into Yeager who found himself clutching the air instead of the ball.

Single runs in the eighth and ninth turned out to be the margin of victory.

The Dodgers got their runs on one-out singles by Willie Davis, Ron Cey, Manny Mota, Bill Russell, and Steve Yeager sandwiched around a strikeout by Steve Garvey. The errors came on Cey's single which was booted by leftfielder Dave Winfield, just removed from the college world series, and an errant throw on the same play by shortstop Derrel Thomas who was trying to cut down Cey after Davis raced around to third.

The inning, the game, and the rally all ended when Tom Paciorek, pinch hitting for Von Joshua who was pinch hitting for Chris Cannizzaro, grounded out to second base.

All 10 of the Dodger hits were singles. Of their 825 hits this season, 637 have been singles.

DODGER NOTES — Claude Osteen (10-3) faces Steve Arlin (4-5) tonight as the Dodgers try to salvage the final game of the series.

By winning Wednesday night, the Padres became the fourth team to hold an edge over the Alstonmen in season competition. The Pads have won five of nine joining Cincinnati (7-6), Houston (3-2) and San Francisco in that category.

Easiest mark for the Dodgers has been Atlanta over whom the Angelenos hold an 11-2 edge. The other teams they've beaten consistently are all in the East, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh (5-1 against each), St. Louis (4-1) and New York (5-2).

Alston made no excuses for the Dodger loss although he pointed out that the early (6 p.m.) starting time made it difficult for the batters to see. "Of course it didn't seem to bother them as much as it bothered us," he added. "We were lucky they didn't get seven or eight runs.'

If the Dodgers had tied the score in the ninth and gone into extra innings, Tom Tischinski would have made his debut as the Dodger catcher. There was also a question of who would have played second base. "Oh, we've got a lot of fellows who could have played," opined the Dodger manager, "(Willie) Crawford, Paciorek, and Garvey."

Alston second guessed himself on taking Downing out for a pinch hitter. "It probably would have been better to use only one pitcher," he said. "Our bullpen needs a rest and things are not going to get better until we get some runs or our starters pitch a shutout."

Russian stops Mayer's bid

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Alex Metreveli of Russia stopped the giant killing career of unseeded Alex Mayer of Wayne, N.J., today and became the first Soviet player ever to reach the finals of the men's singles of the Wimbledon Tennis championships.

The 26-year-old Russian fourth-seed played steady, unspectacular tennis to beat the American intercollegiate champion 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 before Princess Anne, Princess Alexandra and a capacity crowd of 16,000 peers and commoners in Center Court.

Mayer, who eliminated top seed Ilie Nastase of Romania and eighth-seeded Jurgen Fassbender of Germany committed 12 doublefaults and had trouble handling the swarthy Russian's medium-speed high kicking service.

What transpired on Center Court for 2 hours and 40 minutes made the crowd yearn for the return of Stan Smith, Rod Laver and some 60 other top professionals boycotting the tournament. But it must have made 250 million Russians happy.

Metreveli, who looks and acts more like an Italian tenor than a Russian, kept his volatile temper under control except for a loud argument that ended with the reversal of a line call in the seventh game of the first set. Mayer hit out but unaccountably the linesman did not see it.

Metreveli waved his arms and shouted and the crowd joined in demanding the decision be reversed. Finally Mayer himself told the umpire his ball went out and to the applause of the throng play was resumed. Princess Anne —Queen Elizabeth's daughter —remained diplomatically silent during the incident.

Metreveli got the winning service break for the first set in the next game on two fine placements.

Mayer got a break to 3-1 in the second set when Metreveli let a ball go by in the erroneous belief it was going out, and then doublefaulted. The Russian broke back when Mayer doublefaulted and hit out an overhead smash. Mayer broke again to 4-2 —the winning service break —when Metreveli, apparently unable to believe his own eyes, doublefaulted three times, the last one at game point.

Metreveli got the winning service break to 3-1 in the third set, rifling two placements from the net. He came up to the net to put away the first set point.

The Russian broke through to 5-4 in the fourth set when a doublefault gave him break point and he uncorked another in the series of backhand crosscourt placements that bothered Mayer all through the match. Mayer saved one match point with a placement that ended a net duel. But he was in the net with the service return on the second match point.

It may have been only coincidence but America's Mayer came on court wearing a red, white and blue wrist band. Russia's Metreveli, of course, wore solid red.

Taylor beat Sweden's 17-year-old Bjorn Borg in a match in which, after the first set, he was fighting from behind. But Kodes had more trouble than he expected with India's unseeded Vitray Amritraj.

The women's singles final Friday will be an All-American affair between defendent titleholder Billie Jean King of Hilton Head, S.C., and Chris Evert of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., the first time two Americans have met since 1957.

Fourth-seeded Miss Evert stunningly upset topseeded Margaret Court of Australia, 6-1. 1-6, 6-1. Second-seeded Mrs. King beat third-seeded Evonne Goolagong 6-3, 5-7, 6-3 after the Australian had saved seven match points only to drive out on the eighth.

Giants claim top prospect

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants would seem to have another brilliant outfield prospect in Steve Ontiveros of Phoenix, who is only 24.

Latest PCL statistics show him leading the league in hitting at .350, hits with 98, runs scored with 63, total bases with 168, doubles with 25 and triples with 12.

Bob Spence of Eugene has 18 homers and Gene Martin of Hawaii has 61 runs batted in with Ontiveros and Craig Kusick of Tacoma, who is also challenging in about four departments, one back.

The Tucson team is still leading in overall hitting with a solid .301 average.

WBC threat won't bother Thai champ

TIJUANA, Mexico (UPI) — A World Boxing Council threat to strip Venice Borkosor of his world flyweight title isn't going to force the Thai fighter to go through with a contested agreement to box Betulio Gonzalez in August, a representative said Wednesday.

Devit Chatikavinij, speaking for Borkosor, said terms of the contract for the proposed match have not been met by Venezualan promoter Rafito Cedeno.

Chatikavinij also said objections by the WBC will not stop a scheduled nontitle fight between Borkosor and Mexican fighter Julio Guerrero here July 10.

"Our contract with the Venezualan promoter specifies we are to defend the title Aug. 31 at Los Angeles, Bangkok, Thailand, or any other city in the world except Venezuela," Chatikavinij said.

"The Venezuala promoter has not stated to us which city he prefers. Therefore, we do not feel obligated to go to Venezuala or to reject any other fight in the meantime."

Cedeno claims since Borkosor has signed a contract to defend his title against Gonzalez, he cannot fight Guerrero beforehand.

The WBC has intervened in the matter, announcing Tuesday that unless Borkosor abides by the contract he will lose his crown. The WBC also ordered Borkosor or his manager, Chana Sapkeau, to appear before the council in Mexico City before today to explain his intentions.

Chatikavinij said he would telephone the WBC, but that neither Borkosor nor Sapkeau would be able to appear before the council until after the Thai champion's fight next week.

Col. Thong Term, a Thai promoter who claims he has signed Borkosor for another title match for Feb. 9 in Bangkok against Erbito Salvarria, is also reported on his way to Mexico to join in the dispute.

Adams signs Browns' pact

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Pete Adams, a highly-rated lineman from Southern California, has signed a multi-year contract with the Cleveland Browns, the National Football League club said today.

Adams, 6-4 and 260 pounds, was a tackle in college and will be tried as a guard, the Browns said. He was the club's second choice in the first round of the 1973 draft.

Adams, plus Steve Holden and Greg Pruitt, the Browns' other top picks, are on the college all-stars team and thus will not report with other rookies Monday at Hiram College.

Singer has A's singing holiday blues

OAKLAND (UPI) — Bill Singer had the Oakland A's singing the holiday blues.

The only fireworks generated by the A's on the Fourth of July came after they were humbled 3-1 by Singer for his 13th victory. Then the skies over the Oakland Coliseum were aflash with myriads of skyrockets, whistling bombs and fountain fireworks.

Singer scattered six A's singles to become the earliest 13-game winner in Angel history, but he needed relief help in the eighth from Dave Sells. Former Cy Young award winner Dean Chance won his 13th game on Aug. 14 in 1964 when he finished with 20 victories. And when Clyde Wright won 22 in 1970, he didn't post his 13th triumph until July 17.

Oakland had runners on base every inning except the ninth and stranded 12. The only Oakland run came in the third on a walk, Bill North's single and Sal Bando's infield out.

A throwing error by Bando at third led to all the California runs in the seventh.

Bob Oliver started the Angel raily with a one-out double, then scored when Bando threw away Lee Stanton's grounder. Stanton went all the way to third on the error and came home on a single by Vada Pinson, who tallied the final run on Rudy Meoli's double.

Oliver's double was his first hit in 16 official trips while Meoli's hit gave him 3-for-44. On the Oakland side, Gene Tenace went hitless in four trips to go 0-for-25 while Reggie Jackson is 0-for-13 after four fruitless plate appearances.

Jackson was up five times with men on base and walked once. He never got the ball out of the infield the other four times.

The defeat, only Oakland's third in their last 10 games, disappiinted a holiday crowd of 36,741, biggest since opening day. The California victory was only its second in the last seven games.

Despite the loss, the A's remained one game on top of the American League West while California remains in fourth place, only two games off the pace.

Both clubs have an open day today.

Exciting races draw crowds

NEW YORK (UPI) — With exciting races in three of major league baseball's four divisions, crowds totalling 305,721 decided Wednesday to spend the nation's birthday enjoying the national pastime.

A crowd of 45,890 in Bloomington, Minn.—The largest crowd ever to watch a regular season game there—saw the Twins fall to the Kansas City Royals, 5-4. But Los Angeles won top honors in the attendance derby with 46,681 fans.

Oakland had its largest crowd since opening day — 36,741 — and the Yankees, leading the American League's Eastern Division, drew 41,693, the largest crowd at Yankee stadium this year without any promotional items being given away. Baltimore had the smallest crowd with 9,843 fans showing up to watch the Orioles take on the Milwaukee Brewers.

First Annual Firemen's Charity Football Game

Firemen head for Chaffey

ALTA LOMA — Don't be alarmed if you see a handful of fire trucks heading in the directioon of Chaffey College Fridan night.

If you look close enough, you'll probably find that the firefighters will be wearing football uniforms.

Seem strange? Well, it'll only be a few dozen former high school and collegiate grid stars who are now employed with fire departments in Ontario, Montclair and Pomona rushing to Chaffey to participate in the First Annual Fireman's Charity Football Game.

The game pits the firefighters from Ontario and Montclair against the Pomona firemen.

The contest developed when members of the Ontario Fire Department issued a challenge in hopes of turning it into an annual affair.

"There is a pretty strong rivalry between us anyway," said Pomona firemen Mike Hewitt, who will be playing at the running back position. "We're in pretty good shape."

The two teams have already put two scrimmages under their hip pads this week, but have taken the last two days to loosen up and get ready for the game.

"We'll have a light workout before the game," added Hewitt. "We haven't had any bad injuries yet, just a few guys with pulled muscles."

The age group on the Pomona team ranges from 24 to 50, while the Ontario-Montclair squad ranges from 20 years of age to 38.

The veteran of the group, at the age of 50, is running back Tom Clark, the Pomona fire marshall.

Proceeds from the game will go to the Salvation Army's summer camp program for under-privileged children. Chaffey College will also receive a portion of the gate receipts in order to help send the school's basketball team to Hawaii next December to play Hilo College.

The college is furnishing practice and game uniforms and the other equipment for both teams.

"We've contacted the four major television networks," Hewitt commented. "And they seem pretty interested. In fact, a couple of the sportscasters might be at the game."

Both teams have been practicing for the game for about two months.

Quarterbacking the Pomona team will be 25-year-old Bob Falb, with Hewitt, Bob Hecht, Bob Haines, Rich Houston, Clark, Earl Nursement and Bob Miller supplying the backfield running attack.

On the receiving end of things will be Dave Spencer, Chris Rowe, Bill Travis and Ed Neilsen.

Haines was an All-CIFer from Montclair High in the 1962-63 season, while Hecht played for Ganesha High in '63 and Nursement prepped at Chino High.

Running the quarterbacking chores for the Ontario-Montclair team will be Glen Bailey and Mike Harden. The rest of the backfield will consist of Ron Mayfield, Ken Walker, Randy Rohrer, Dennis Wafford, Jim Brown, Bill Alexander, Don Moore and Mark Boyd.

On the receiving end of the passes will be Dave Woeste, John Lee, Ed Talbott, Ed McGready, John Proctor and Darrell Harriman.

Game time is slated for 8 p.m. with a fireworks show in the making.

Pomona, La Verne sweep American Legion twinbills

POMONA — Pomona Post 30 and La Verne Post 330 both swept key American Legion District 18 twinbills Wednesday afternoon.

Post 30 displayed some fireworks in 6-1 and 8-6 wins over La Puente Post 75 while La Verne had some July Fourth fun with San Gabriel winning 11-6 and 8-1.

Covina is atop the standings with a 10-1 mark while the Gems are in third place with a 7-3 slate and La Verne right behind Pomona at 6-4.

Post 30's twinbill sweep had a definite flavor to it as Cande Rael figured heavily in the pitching as well as the offensive department. The third baseman-pitcher earned a save in relief of starter Mark Lambert in the opener as he drove home what turned out to be the winning runs with a two-run double in the sixth inning of the first game.

In the nightcap, Rael picked up for starter Larry Pekarcik in the fifth inning with the Gems trailing 5-4. The righthander allowed one run and three hits to notch his third win of the campaign without a loss as his teammates came up with three runs in their last at bat.

Post 30 took the opener 6-1 and were sparked by Wil Lewallen's four-for-four performance. The flashy shortstop also scored twice, walked once and drove in a run. Keith Thomas chipped in three hits in five at bats while Greg Ballard and Rael added two hits each. Both of Rael's hits were doubles.

The Gems broke a scoreless deadlock in the sixth as Rael doubled home two runs.

La Puente cut the deficit to 2-1 in the seventh as John Botorff, Robert Dominic, and John Vander Wende all singled to open the inning. Lambert then retired the side on two strike outs and an infield pop up.

Rael took the mound and retired the final six outs in order after Lambert had allowed a leadoff single to Rick Hertel in the eighth.

RBI singles by Jon Freeman, Thomas, and Lewalen gave the Gems their final three runs in the eighth.

La Puente stranded 10 runners with its offensive attack being led by Rick Hertel (three-for-four) and Dominic (two-for-three).

The second game was a see-saw battle with La Puente jumping out to a 4-1 lead after three frames.

Post 30 knotted the game in the fifth with three runs only to have LP take a 5-4 lead in the bottom of the inning.

The teams traded runs in the sixth with La Puente still enjoying a slim 6-5 advantage going into the final turn at bat.

Roger Slayton started the Gems rolling with a single with Thomas reaching base on an error. Ballard bounced into a fielders choice with Slayton scoring and tying the game at 6-6. Bill Wilkinson follwed with a clutch single scoring Thomas and Ballard with the game-winning runs.

Larry Pekarcik started for Pomona and went four innings allowing five runs and seven hits. Rael took over in the fifth hurling two innings allowing one run and three hits to earn the win.

Post 30 is idle until Saturday and Sunday when it hosts District 18 League leading Covina Post 207 in a two-game series. Covina has 1 0-1 mark while the Gems are 7-3.

With eight games remaining on its league schedule Post 30 is in a must win situation with the Covina clash.

La Verne fought back from a 6-1 deficit in the opener scoring five times in the fifth and four more in the eighth to take a 11-6 decision before Paul Willman's four-hit pitching performance in the 8-1 second game win.

Trailing by five runs in the fifth, La Verne utilized its team speed to the fullest when two runs scored on a bases loaded walk to Mark Bumstead. Rick Ortega was on third with Jim Vallone, the Most Valuable Player of the Upland Legion Tournament, on second. As the fourth wide one to Bumstead got away from the catcher Vallone hustled his way home from second on the play. Harold Drake followed with a two-run double.

Steve Barnard hit a solo blast in the second inning his second of the year, and Greg Thompson countered with a solo roundtripper in the sixth his second homer of the season.

Drake was the top hitter with three safeties while Thompson, Willman and Bumstead all contributed a pair of hits.

Rick Ravencamp won the decision in relief of starter Brian Ranney and threw five full frames, allowing only two hits while striking out six.

Post 330 was enjoying a 1-0 lead in the nightcap when it erupted for four runs in the fifth. The big blow of the inning was Mark Willman's second three-run home run of the day. He ended the afternoon going four-for-eight with eight RBI's including his fourth and fifth roundtrippers of the year.

Thompson and Drake both chimed in with two-for-three performances.

Paul Willman won his first start of the year going the full seven innings and allowed four hits and a seventh inning run.

Post 330 is now 23-9 overall and 6-4 in league play having won 15 of its last 16 games. It's only loss was to Covina during that streak.

La Verne plays Ontario tonight at John Galvin Park in an 8 p.m. non-conference game.

San Dimas gains ground with victory

POMONA — San Dimas climbed to within one game of Diamond Bar in their duel for the Pomona Valley Big League championship. With only three games remaining in the season, the top spot is up for grabs.

San Dimas edged Ted Greene 5-4 Wednesday afternoon while Diamond Bar fell victim to a seven-run inning and lost to Pomona American 7-1. In other Big League action, Pomona National slid by Pomona NW-SW, 4-3.

Ted Greene collected 10 hits in the contest while San Dimas had only three. But to go along with San Dimas' three hits were nine walks and two hit batsmen.

In a losing cause, Dave Guerra went three for four. All three hits were singles. Dave Comptom also contributed two singles.

Pomona NW-SW started off fast scoring three times in the first inning. A single, an error, a fielder's choice and a walk accounted for one run. Johnson then singled home two more runs.

Keith Glover, Pomona National's pitcher, settled down and allowed only two more hits the rest of the game.

Glover aided his own cause with a two-run double in the fourth. Delfino Serna then singled Glover home.

Pomona National's winning rally in the seventh started on a single by Rick Koppleman. Scot Peich followed with a single and Paul Bentley walked to load the bases. Danny Hess then singled to score Koppleman and end the game.

Judith heads feature field

INGLEWOOD (UPI) — Judith, with Fernando Toro up, was to lead a field of eight fillies and mares, 3-year-old and up, into today's $15,000 feature at Hollywood Park, a mile on the turf.

Sun Festival, Vacation Lady, Fort Sonoma, Chargerette, Fleet Ahead Best Go and Always Lucky complete the field.

Longshot Kentuckian won a nose victory over three other horses, all less than half a length behind, to win the $84,150 American Handicap on Wednesday's card.

The victory was worth $50,400 for Kentuckian, which retured $34.20, $14.60 and $5.40. Life Cycle finished second and Wing Out was third.

Kentuckian, which came from well off the pace, won the 1⅛ mile race on the turf in the good time of 1:48. It was only his third Stakes Victory of the year, but brought his earnings to $98,000 this year.

Diamond Bar's lead cut

By TOM FAHEY
P-B Correspondent

DIAMOND BAR —Pomona American erupted for seven runs in the sixth inning and went on to stun Diamond Bar Wednesday evening 7-1. In other Pomona Valley Big League action, San Dimas edged Ted Greene, 5-4.

San Dimas' win and Diamond Bar's loss left the two teams separated by one game in quest for the top position. With three games remaining for both teams, Diamond Bar still holds a narrow lead.

Pomona American was stymied by Diamond Bar's pitcher Bill Fleming for the first five innings. However, the sixth inning proved to be different.

American had their first six men get on base safely before Diamond Bar could get someone out. Two of the men received walks, and the other four all reached base on bunts.

The first bunt single was left alone to see if it would roll foul, but it stayed on the chalk. The next two bunts were both picked up by Fleming, but both times he was unable to throw the ball to anyone. Catcher Tracy Cowger tried to nail a runner at third, and the result was two runs as the ball went into left field.

Jesse Mendez provided the final two runs with a double to left. Mendez had a double and a walk in the sixth. Bruce Black also chipped in with two singles in the big inning.

Diamond Bar scored on a run-producing double off the bat of Pete Leibrick. The hit scored Tracy Cowger who had reached base on an error by the pitcher.

Bill Fleming pitched a fine game up to the sixth. Bart Sullivan came in to extinguish the fireworks in the sixth. He retired the four batters he faced over the last two innings.

Diamond Bar will try to maintain its slim lead when it takes on Ted Greene at Pomona High at 1:30 p.m. Sunday. Its season will end next Wednesday with Pomona National the foe.

Pomona American will close out its season playing Pomona NW-SW at Simons Jr. High, Sunday at 1:30 p.m., and then, meeting Ted Greene at Ralph Welch Park, Wednesday at 5:30 p.m.

Blackfin holds early lead

LOS ANGELES (UPI) Former course record holder Blackfin, a 75-foot ketch skippered by Kenneth Demeuse of the St. Francis Yacht Club, was in the early lead after nine hours of the 2,225-mile Transpacific Yacht Race from Los Angeles Harbor to Honolulu.

Sailing past the race communications boat just west of Santa Catalina Island, less than 100 miles from their start, the entries encountered fair visibility and winds of about 10 knots.

Trailing Blackfin, one of a fleet of 60 sailing vessels of various sizes, after Wednesday's trouble-free run for the starting line, were sloops Robon and Ragtime, Cutter Buccaneer, Ketch Windward Passage, Schooner New World and Ketch Ondine.

Cardinals return with split verdict

APPLE VALLEY — Claremont Connie Mack returned from Tuesday night's doubleheader with Apple Valley with a split decision.

The Cardinals dropped the first game on a seventh inning three-run home run by winning pitcher Gene Shults, 10-9 before coming back in the nightcap to win 5-3.

The Cardinals were in a first game slugfest that saw them leading 3-0, trailing 4-3, leading 5-4, trailing 6-5, leading 9-6, and losing 10-9.

Claremont bombed out four home runs in the losing effort. Tony Janusz ripped a pair of two-run blasts, his second and third of the year, and ended the game with a three-for-four performance including four ribbies and the team lead in that department with 18.

Mark Robertson went two-for-four and hit one out of the park while Louie Caudillo chimed in with a pinch-hit two-run homer.

Gary Bach extended his hitting streak to 10 games and leads the team with a .423 average.

Harry Brown started and went two innings before giving way to a sore shoulder. Mr. Dependable, John Hudleston, went the middle three innings with Monty Moose hurling the final two frames and taking the loss (2-2).

Jim Ayers carried the club in the second game going two-run double in the seventh and driving in three runs. His two-for-four and catcher turned out to be the winning margin.

Bach had two hits and scored twice, Janusz went two-for-four and catcher Lance Black added a pair of hits and two ribbies.

John Huddleston will start for Claremont today in a make-up game with Charter Oak. The righthander is now 6-3 and as the workhorse of the staff has pitched in 17 of the 21 games. The Cards are 13-8 overall and 6-4 in league play.

Milwaukee big chance for golfers

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — The underdog majority of the pro golf tour sets out today to attack par on the hilly, 7,101 yard Tuckaway Country Club course in quest of the $26,000 top prize of the Greater Milwaukee Open.

It was the first time Tuckaway was site of the GMO in the tourney's six-year history and it should prove to be the toughest layout used yet.

Par 72 will be broken, but it probably won't take the whipping it would if the likes of Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Arnold Palmer, Tom Weiskopf, Bruce Crampton, Gary Player, Billy Casper or Johnny Miller were on hand.

Big season for Angels in NW play

POMONA — Randy Reynolds is having a big season for the Angels Pomona in the Pomona Northwest Little League. He is a big reason why the Angels are in first place with a 13-5 season record.

Reynolds relieved starting pitcher Eric Thomas after two innings in a recent 14-2 win over Woodland Products and struck out seven batters in the final four innings.

So far this season, Reynolds is a perfect 5-0 on the mound and is hitting .523.

Clark Brothers won the championship in the Ted Greene Little League with a tight 8-7 win over Pomona First Federal in eight innings. Jeff Osborne was the winning pitcher with Bill Powers' single driving home the winning run.

Pat Reynolds, Don Hill and Bob Eckl combined for 13 strikeouts while allowing only two hits in Mautz' 8-1 win over Gemco in the Pomona National Little League.

Jaimie Navarro started a big double play to help McDonald's edge the Elks, 10-9. He caught a fly ball and threw in time to first baseman Jon Traeber to double-up the runner.

Reynolds and Jeff Rich combined for 14 strikeouts to help Mautz beat Cave Pharmacy, 3-2. Erich Stein hit a home run for Mautz. Champion Piech Construction scored two runs in the bottom of the sixth inning on Don Milner's single to edge the Pomona Police Association, 9-8.

Stein, Traeber and Vic Wright of Gemco hit home runs during the week. Danny Edminston and Richard Chapman of McDonald's belted triples.

Park Avenue Hospital and Optimist share the second half lead in the Pomona American Little League after Park Avenue took an 8-7 win over Optimist. Rennaldo Tolention's double was the big hit for Park Avenue while Fred Macias hit a three-run homer for Optimist.

CUNA Mutual's Kevin Williams did it again as he hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning to give CUNA a 6-4 win over Emblem Club. Optimist catcher Fernando Larez belted his seventh and eighth homer to lead his team to a 16-2 rout of CUNA.

Astros stage own display of fireworks

By United Press International

While people from all over the country enjoyed Fourth of July celebrations Wednesday night, the Atlanta Braves and Houston Astros staged a "fireworks" display of their own . . . with baseballs serving as skyrockets.

The Astros swept a holiday doubleheader from the Braves, 11-4 and 12-8, and in the process, the two teams banged out 56 hits, including 10 home runs, to highlight the day's National League activity.

Houston collected 30 hits in the doubleheader — 15 in each game — and got a pair of homers each from Doug Rader and Tommie Agee and a grand slam in the nightcap from Lee May. Rader had five RBI s in the doubleheader.

The Braves got 12 hits in the first game, including homers by Frank Tepedino and Darrell Evans, and banged out 14 hits in the nightcap, including a pair of homers by Dave Johnson and a solo shot by Ralph Garr.

"I really like hitting in Atlanta Stadium," said Rader, who echoes the sentiments of most NL batters. "It's a lot easier to hit one out of here then in the Astrodome."

In other NL action, Montreal Beat New York 7-5 San Diego downed Los Angeles 4-2, St. Louis routed Pittsburgh 11-3, Chicago topped Philadelphia 3-2 in 10 innings and San Francisco whipped Cincinnati 6-2.

Montreal rallied for seven runs in the eighth inning to defeat the Mets for the third straight day. The Mets had a 5-0 lead behind ace Tom Seaver when the Expos erupted for five hits against Seaver and reliever Buzz Capra, with pinch-hitter Ron Woods delivering the big blow — a three-run homer. Willie Mays, George Theodore and Duffy Dyer all homered for the Mets.

Ted Sizemore and Ken Reitz each drove in three runs to spark the Cardinals' victory over the Pirates. The Cards scored eight runs in the fourth inning to break the game open and provide Tom Murphy with his first victory of the year. Al Oliver had a homer for Pittsburgh.

Ron Santo hit a two-run homer with one out in the last of the 10th inning to lift the Cubs to victory over the Phillies. Philadelphia had gone ahead 2-1 in the top of the inning, but Glenn Beckert singled to open the Cubs' 10th and Santo followed with his 11th homer of the year.

The Giants, trailing 2-1 after six innings, erupted for four runs in the seventh inning to defeat the Reds. The Giants collected five hits in the inning with Gary Thomasson delivering a run-scoring triple and Dave Rader singling home Thomasson with the go-ahead run.

Yankees not really Yanks of old

By United Press International

Don't worry, American League fans. The Yankees aren't really back.

They still wear the pinstripes and they're still in first place but these aren't the old Yankees. They're not going to run away with anything.

In a holiday doubleheader at Yankee Stadium Wednesday before 41,693 fans, the 1973 Yankees did something the old Yankees never used to do. They beat themselves.

Suffering a pair of losses to the Boston Red Sox by 2-1 and 1-0 margins the Yankees had their Eastern Division lead over Baltimore shaved to to two games while both Boston and Detroit are only four games out.

The first game is the one the old Yankees would have never lost. Boston trailed 1-0 with one out and the bases loaded in the ninth inning when Carlton Fisk rapped a hard grounder at third baseman Craig Nettles. It could have been a game-ending double play.

Nettles fired to Bernie Allen at second for the second out but pinch-runner Tommy Harper barreleed into Allen whose relay ticked off the glove of first baseman Ron Blomberg as the tying run scored. Carl Yastrzemski, who was on second never stopped running and headed for home.

Blomberg retrieved the ball and could have thrown Yaz out at the plate but this throw was low and skipped past catcher Thurman Munson as Yaz scored the winning run.

"It was just a stupid play, a stupid play," Bomberg said. Yaz, explaining why he took the gamble of being thrown out at the plate, said, "When the ball got behind him, I had to force something."

He forced it and stole a win for the Sox.

Manager Ralph Houk, explaining why he didn't take out Blomberg for a defensive replacement, said "You can't take his bat out of the game. It was just one of those plays that happens maybe every 20 games or so."

Ironically, Houk took Blomberg's bat out of the game in the last of the ninth. With two on and two out, Blomberg was due to bat against lefty reliever Bob Veale. Blomberg does'nt usually face lefties and so Celerino Sanchez batted for him and grounded out to end the game.

In the second game, Yaz singled in the only run of the contest and Rogelio Moret pitched his first complete game in nearly two years to beat George Medich with a six-hitter.

In other AL games, Baltimore beat Milwaukee, 6-4 in 10 innings in the completion of a suspended game and then beat the Brewers 10-7 in the regular game, Chicago beat Texas twice 2-0 and 6-2, California downed Oakland, of a suspended galme and 3-1, Kansas City edged minnesota 5-4 and Cleveland downed Detroit 5-2.

Ellie Hendricks' two run homer in the 10th inning gave Baltimore the victory over Milwaukee in the completion of Tuesday night's suspended game. In the regularly scheduled game, Paul Blair's two-run single in the eighth lifted Baltimore to victory.

Buddy Bradford's homer and a four hit shutout by Jim Geddes and Cy Acosta gave Chicago its victory over Texas in the first game. In the second game Chicago's Bart Johnson and Terry Forster combined on a four-hitter to complete the doubleheader sweep.

California took advantage of Sal Bando's throwing error to score three runs in the seventh and beat Oakland. Bill Singer got his 13th win with relief help from Dave Sells while Dave Hamilton took the loss.

Leo Cardenas singled home two runs to help Cleveland beat Detroit. Milt Wilcox went 5 1-3 innings to get the win with relief help from Tom Hilgendorf while Mike Strahler took the loss.

NFL player reveals his bribe offer

DALLAS (UPI) Ed Hughes, former head coach of the Houston Oilers, said today center Jerry Sturm may have met face to face with another former player who offered him a $30,000 bribe to influence the point spreads in three national Football League games in 1971.

The Washington Post reported Wednesday that Sturm a 15-year veteran of the NFL and Canadian Football, admitted he was contacted by a former player and personal friend who offered him $10,000 per game to affect the scoring.

"He (Sturm) told me he received a phone call before the game that made an offer for him to throw the last three ball games," Hughes said. "He reported to me and I reported to the investigating committee of the commissioner's office prior to the game.

"This was probably an hour before game time. It's ironic that we won the last three games."

Hughes said both he and Sturm were acquainted with the man who allegedly made the bribe offer, but both the coach and former player have refused to divulge the man's name.

"Jerry's completely innnocent in this, Hughes said. "He did the right thing."

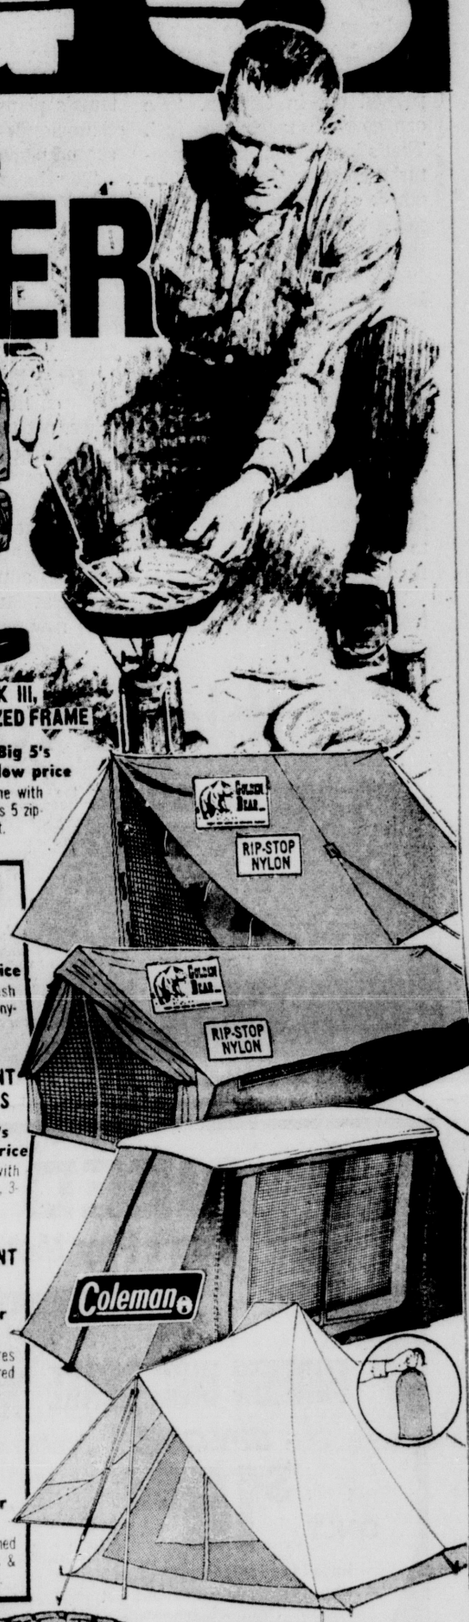

Sturm, who now lives in Denver, said he turned down the offer because he did not want to jeopardize his family.

Hobbs thinks his tricky plan for Can-Am title will still work

ATLANTA, Ga.—"I'll admit our tricky plan to win the 1973 Can-Am championship has taken a shot in the mouth from the rules makers," says Englishman David Hobbs, looking toward Sunday's Carling Can-Am race at Road Atlanta in Gainesville, Ga. "But I still think it will work," Hobbs adds quickly.

Hobbs drives a Black Label McLaren using a non-turbocharged Roy Woods Cheverolet racing engine. Before the opening race at Mosport, Ontario, in this year's Canadian-American Challenge Cup series, Hobbs said his team should have one distinct advantage over the turbocharged cars driven by the other top contenders.

"Those turbocharged Porsche and Chevrolet-engined cars will have to pack in nearly 100 gallons of gasoline for these 200-mile races," he pointed out in Canada. "We can go with much less fuel. That's less weight in our non-turbocharged McLaren. The others are going to carry too much fuel to be fast all the time, or they're going to have to stop to refuel while we keep going."

Then, after the Mosport race SCCA officials changed the rules in time for this weekend's second event on the schedule. From a standard, 200-mile race length that has prevailed for years, Can-Ams have been changed to two-heat races. No cars will have to carry gasoline for more than about 100 miles.

"We'll start all even with fuel loads, I suppose," says Hobbs, "and there goes a nice thing for us.

"Still, look what happened in the race at Mosport. Considering we never started, we were very lucky," Hobbs pointed out. The Black Label McLaren crashed in practice when a half-shaft failed. The car was too badly damaged to start the race.

"For one reason or other," Hobbs continued, "the biggest names in the series all went out of the race. Donohue, Follmer, Scheckter—all of them in turbo-ed Porsches and all of them failed in one way or another. Charlie Kemp won the race and now he is out of the Carling race here because of a testing accident. Next Sunday will be almost like starting the season championship for all of us," Hobbs says.

Earlier, Hobbs had described the Roy Woods' tema's plans for winning the championship as "gunning for second place in each race.

"We have to assume Donohue's going to win more often than not," Hobbs said. Mark Donohue has been expected to dominate the 1973 Can-Am driving a new, turbocharged Porsche entered by Roger Penske.

"But I have great faith in the crankiness of the Porsches, not to mention the odd turbocharged McLaren," Hobbs says. "It obviously doesn't take much to get them off key."

Hobbs' pre-season prediction was almost entirely confirmed at Mosport. The question now is whether the change to a two-heat system will result in improving the bocharged cars.
reliability of contending, tur-

"And, of course, with Mario Andretti we have a major new factor in the Carling Can-Am," Hobbs now adds. "Andretti's one of the best in the world and, despite the newness of his turbocharged design, his being in the field changes the picture quite a lot."

Hobbs has become one of the most popular and busiest drivers in North America. The former (1971) L&M Championship winner has finished third, fourth and in sixth place twice in the same Formula 5000 series this year. He finished 11th driving a Black Label Eagle in the recent Indianapolis 500.

Southland racing

CORONA — Another triple header will kick off the action at Corona Raceway Saturday night at 8 p.m.

On tap for the evening's entertainment will be a full show of figure 8 quarter mile oval and powder puff. The racing will get under way with the "ladies" main event, which as always will be a real slam bang affair. Bev Arnold from Riverside will be trying to hold on to the point lead, as she attempts to hold off Diane Skillman, Connie Church, and the 50 year old great grandmother, Mabel Masters.

The figure 8 action is almost impossible to describe. 35 cars trying to beat each other through the intersection without getting hit, has to be the formula for a super show. Jimmy Jay from Anaheim will be dicing with the old" master" Jack Twitchell and Fred Arnold from Riverside for the lead as these daredevils try to survive the torturous 15 lap main.

CORONA — Sunday at 7 p.m. will mark the return of the high flying Spring Buggies and Sprint Sedans on Corona Raceway's difficult buggy course.

The course has been re-designed to add even more action than before. Included in the new course is a monster jump that will launch the sedands and buggiesup to 10 feet in the air, with jumps of up to 50 feet in length expected. Along with the tight turns and long straights, a ½ mile sweeper has been included to let the drivers test their sliding abilities.

The sedans and buggies have been broken into two different sections: stock and unlimited. The stock sedans are just that. They are powered by stock 1600cc VW engines. The unlimited class is an open class that takes advantage of the high powered corvairs and trick modified VWs.

On tap for the evening's racing will be the usual 4 lap trophy dashes the powder puff event, the heat races, and the toll taking 35 lap main event.

Motor Sports International takes OCIR

Commencing Saturday, all drag races at Orange County International Raceway will be conducted by Motor Sports International Inc., under the sanction of the American Hot Rod Association.

OCIR president Bill White explained that Orange County International Raceway has opted to withdraw from direct operation of its events in order to provide more comprehensive management for the many different activities that now occupy the facility.

Operations leasing from OCIR under new arrangement include drag racing, motorcycle road races, speedway and moto-cross racing for motorcycles, sports car road races, a driver training school for police officers and a storage compound.

Motorsports International purchasers of the drag racing lease, have also purchased title to the major championship races established by OCIR during the past six years with the intent of maintaining these races.

Tibblin developing competitors

Deke Houlgate

Motor sport today

Sending the offspring to summer camp used to be an uncomplicated ritual. The places that were available had names like Ak-a-Wah-Nee and Orizaba, and the kids lived in tents, and they swam and made ashtrays that broke and belts that came apart, and the counselor made them write home at least once while they were gone.

Not today. There are foot ball camps, basketball camps, tennis camps, encounter camps, close-to-nature camps foreign language schools in foreign countries and ocean going universities that sail around the world.

Did you know there is now a place to send that kid who wakes you up every Saturday morning when he rap-raps his motorcycle? No, not that place, one right here on earth.

It is called the Husqvarna International Training Center, headquartered at Carlsbad International Raceway a few miles inland from the ocean near San Diego, Cal., and its guiding light is Rolf Tibblin. Tibblin is the 1959-62-63 world motocross champion from Sweden and the only man ever to win in both the 250 cc and 500 cc classes.

Tibblin considers himself old for world class moto-cross racing at 37, but nevertheless he has come out of retirement the last week or so to test the present crop of champions against what he remembers.

He is not, he emphasized, making a comeback.

Tibbin's mission these days is the development of American riders into world class competitors, and it is at his school where this process should begin, in his estimation.

"Many riders start to race too early," Tibblin said. "They don't know what they are doing. They have no feeling for what it takes to win.

"The most important thing to do in moto-cross is be relaxed. It makes you agile like a dancer. It is very difficult to learn to relax. It can take maybe five years to learn. Many riders never learn.

"I was so bad when I started racing, so slow. But I watched the other guys, and I went home and practiced around the house. Because I had to work so hard to be good I think I am a better teacher."

Tibblin's basic five-day course begins with calisthenics and a one-to three-mile run. For students not in shape, he starts them briskly walking three miles. They are asked to jog a shortdistance from time to time and build up the amount of running each day.

His training regimen includes regular rest periods, and he declares, "Really rest!" as he demonstrates by flopping on the floor, limp and motionless.

He is dead set against drinking, smoking and drugs in any form. His contention, based on an experiment he witnessed in Sweden, is that riders do not perform at their best for a long time after they have sobered up from being drunk.

Students at Tibblin's moto-cross school, after all, are there to learn about riding techniques, and that is mostly what the course is about, but Tibblin includes proper nutrition, a minimum of 10 hours' sleep a night and mental discipline as important facets of the program. That's why living at his camp is essential to the instruction.

Rider skill levels are unimportant to Tibblin at the start of any session. He teachers beginners and champions with equal ease. It's something to consider for a week's rest from the little monster next door or even one living in your own home.

Inflation is already a major problem for auto racing. It appears that motorcycle racing may be next. An identification of trouble ahead for promoters is the hard line taken by the American Motorcycle Assn.'s current point leader toward today's purses.

"I figure the promoters are making a fortune," said Yamaha's top factory rider, who is in the midst of his second campaign as a journeyman expert rider on the AMA Grand National circuit.

"They keep complaining about expenses, but you look at the crowds and you know they are cleaning up," Roberts said. "Daytona had 100,000 in the stands for the two days, they said but it looked like more. They paid only a $50,000 purse.

"The Houston Astrodome paid only $12,000 a night (for two nights of racing) and they said they had only 62,000 people. The lowest ticket was $5.50.

"I'd just as soon the promoters make thousands of dollars, but they ought to get a percentage going. If they don't get a good crowd, I think we wouldn't mind taking less, but the way we are doing it we can't make any money."

Roberts charged that point races leading to the national riding championship usually pay $5,000 for first place, $3,000 for second and $1,000 for third. Last place in a 12-bike field grosses about $400.

"You just can't do it for that," Roberts said. "That's stupid."

Coming from Roberts, those are hard words. As a factory rider he is flown into the next race from wherever he happens to be. He has no responsibility toward maintaining the equipment. There is a factory-paid crew to do that, a fringe benefit he didn't enjoy last season when, he recalls, his equipment blew up in 12 of the 24 races he was in.

"I just get on and start riding when the flag drops," he said. "I don't know how an independent can do it, the way the money is."

Roberts said he would have about $10,000 invested in a dirt track bike if he had to race without a factory contract, and that's only one piece of equipment.

Bunker seen as Nixon's envoy to Panama sessions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon expects soon to name Ellsworth Bunker, former U.S. ambassador to Saigon, to head a new effort to negotiate a settlement of the Panama Canal problem, diplomatic sources said Wednesday.

The unresolved problem of the status of the Panama Canal Zone and the waterway which links the Atlantic and Pacific oceans has clouded U.S.-Panamanian relations for many years.

The United States has been insisting on close control of the international waterway, while Panama has decried the continued American presence as a holdover of imperialism.

Bunker, 79, stepped down as ambassador to South Vietnam earlier this year after holding the post through the height of the war. The silver-haired Vermonter is one of the distinguished veterans of the American foreign service, known for his ability to handle difficult assignments.

Bunker has had considerable experience in Latin America, having served as U.S. ambassador to Argentina in 1951 and the U.S. representative to the Organization of American States in 1964.

His projected assignment is one which has stumped many other diplomats.

Ambassador Robert O. Anderson, who has been heading the U.S. negotiating team, recently submitted his resignation to Nixon without having been able to bring the two sides closer together.

State Department officials said they expected the United States shortly to accept the invitation of Panamanian Foreign Minister Juan Tack to send a negotiating team back to Panama to resume discussions which were broken off over a year ago.

The Panamanian invitation was issued following numerous probes by the United States made at the extraordinary U.N. Security Council session which was held in Panama in mid-March. The Panamanians had engineered the council meeting in their country as part of an effort to pressure the United States to soften its position.

State Department officials were cautious about predicting whether the expected new effort to resolve the canal issue would be successful. They said it appeared the Panamanian position remained very hard.

The United States gained control of the Panama Canal Zone in 1903 "in perpetuity," but over the years, the U.S.-Panamanian agreement has been revised. A particularly serious effort was made in 1964 after anti-American riots broke out. But no final agreement has ever been reached.

Panama wants the United States to hand over the canal to Panama by 1994, increase its annual payments to Panama, and reduce it's military presence in the Canal Zone.

The United States wants to hold onto the canal for another 50 years, maintain it's 6,000 troops in the zone, and have the right to add a new lane to the waterway or build a new sea level canal.

Drug spy nailed as deserter

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Ronald D. Nicholson was hired by the University of Texas police and planted in a dormitory to act as an undercover agent to nail drug users and pushers. Now Nicholson has been arrested and charged as a deserter from the Navy.

From the information supplied by Nicholson, the Travis County grand jury handed down 48 sealed indictments and university police arrested 16 persons, 14 of them in a predawn campus raid May 17. They confiscated 3,000 doses of LSD and 15 pounds of marijuana.

Nicholson, 22, received a subpoena to testify at a pretrial hearing on the drug cases and when he went to answer it Monday, Travis County Sheriff Raymond Frank slapped a pair of handcuffs on him and took him to jail, charged with desertion from the Armed Forces.

Nicholson was transferred Tuesday to authorities at the Dallas Naval Air Station where the desertion charges were filed. The former Navy reservist was ordered to report for active duty June 1 but never appeared.

Travis County District Attorney Robert O. Smith, whose staff is prosecuting the drug cases, said he will still try to produce Nicholson as a witness.

"We're going to try to get him but whether the Navy will release him is another thing," Smith said.

The District Attorney said he does not plan to drop the drug charges but Sheriff Frank said he doubts the case will ever come to court.

"In my opinion (Nicholson) has been discredited now," Frank said. "I would seriously doubt they would prosecute the cases now."

The sheriff also said he would rather not see undercover agents in general, and Nicholson in particular used in this type of work.

"I'm doing my best as a reform-minded law enforcement officer to see that complete honesty and integrity are used in law enforcement," Frank said. "I do not want to see use of the practice of entrapment and I think it's very bad judgment for any law enforcement to use a man of this kind."

Michigan extended suffrage to women in 1919, a year before their right to vote was guaranteed by the federal constitution.

Redlands orchestra to present concert

REDLANDS — The REDLANDS Bowl Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Harry Farbman, will perform Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony in a concert at the Bowl at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday.

Farbman spends his winters as a professor of musice at Indiana University, teaching violin and conducting various orchestras as a staff member. He has also conducted his own orchestra the Springfield (Ill).) Symphony, for 22 years.

Starting his professional career as a concert violinist, he later had his own string quartet. He was also concertmaster of the National Symphony of Washington, and of Alfred Wallenstein's Symphony on WOR. Just before coming to Redlands he was concertmaster and associated conductor of the St. Louis Symphony.

Guest soloist for Tuesday evening will be Javier Calderon, classicial guitarist, who will play "Concierto de Aranjuez" by Rodrigo. Calderon was born in La Paz, Bolivia, and began playing the guitar at 9. He made his formal debut at 18 with the National symphony Orchestra of Bolivia. He later studied in Spain with Segovia, and was graduated from the North Carolina Schools of Arts in 1971. In addition to his many concert appearances with symphony orchestras and in solo recitals, he also teaches guitar at Indiana University School of Music.

Singapore's population is 2.2 million.

ALL AT SEA — Everything's shipshape with the cast of Valley Community Theater's production of "Dames at Sea." Musical 'Orphans' slated at Citrus

AZUSA — A new musical, "The Orphans," will have its West Coast premiere in the Citrus College auditorium at 8 p.m. July 13 and 14 and at 4:30 p.m. July 15.

Book, music and lyrics are by Wiley Reynolds.

Under the direction of Fred Vaugeoise, a cast of 26 actors and dancers from the San Gabriel Valley and Los Angeles areas, selected in open tryouts, will take part in the first event of the Citrus College summer theater season.

Ben Bollinger is vocal and choral director. The orchestra is under the direction of Don Brinegar.

Eight dance numbers choreographed by Harriet Davidson will be highlighted by a five-movement ballet suit in the second act.

Unusual multi-level sets interpreting open staging have been designed by Clifford Davidson. Costumes for the modern day production have been designed by Miss Gail of Hollywood.

Sixteen original jazz numbers and ballads make up Reynolds' score with additional music by Louis Milliken and Rob Skinnell.

The plot follows two brothers, 10 and 12 years of age at the opening, through eight subsequent years during which they develop from two lonely boys in an orphanage to young adults with divergent ideals.

The role of the younger brother, Ben, as a boy in the orphange, will be played by Brad Wollman of Glendora. His older brother, Norman played by Phil Florence of Covina, has his hands full trying to keep Ben out of trouble in the orphange run by Mr. Oby, played by Arnold Rollin of Glendora.

Eventually Aunt Charlotte, played by Frances Alva of Azusa, takes the boys out of the orphange and into her home and heart.

While in school, the boys meet Peggy, the romantic feminine lead played as a girl by Vicki Schreck of Los Angeles.

In their young adult years, Ben is played by Ken Wollman of Glendora, Norman by Bill Morrison of Los Angeles, and Peggy by Christopher Cass of Los Angeles.

Throughout the play the narrator, Michael Peru of Glendora, interprets the action for the audience.

Admission will be $2.50, adults; $1.25 students. Tickets reservations may be made by telephoning the Citrus College auditorium box office, (213) 335-6116, from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Prime time problems

Only one new variety show set for fall television

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI — There will be only one new weekly, prime time variety series on the commercial television networks when the upcoming season begins.

And even that show, "NBC Follies" will have no regular star-host, another indication that network video is still having trouble getting and holding top headliners who can carry a series from week to week.

The number of regular variety series has shrunk considerably in recent times. The oldtime big-name stars like Jack Benny and Bob Hope are getting older. The sought-after audience is younger than before. And the government cutback on network brought about more emphasis on shows believed to have a more certain bread-and-butter appeal to viewers—action programs and straight comedies.

In short, the networks have drifted toward shows they apparently think will give maximum ratings protection to their reduced amount of prime time. And how ironic it is to think that the weekly variety show—once a programming staple that helped build audiences for the young video medium—now is represented in a relatively minor way in the prime viewing hours.

One thinks of just some of the many personalities whose variety series once commanded wide popularity and viewer loyalty: Milton Berle, Jackie Gleason, Ed Sullivan, Dinah Shore, Jack Paar, Arthur Godfrey, Steve Allen, Garry Moore, Perry Como, The Smothers Brothers, Dan Rowan and Dick Martin with their "Laugh-In" series that added a new pacing dimension to the variety format. And of course Benny, and Hope. And all the others.

Well, Carol Burnett will be back this fall with her CBS-TV variety series, and thus far she has shown a staying power that few stars in television can match. No one can doubt that she is one of the great headliners in the history of the medium. And, at least going into the new season, her series has a more definite sense of permanence and security than can be found in any other weekly network variety show.

NBC-TV, of course, has the Flip Wilson series, which has also been a popular success, but this coming season will—by the comedian's own choice—be his last on a weekly basis with this particular show, for he has opted for periodic specials instead after that.

CBS-TV also has the Sonny & Cher series, but it has been something less than a smashing ratings hit. And NBC-TV has the Dean Martin Show which was a solid entry for a long time, but has been running out of gas and is being brought back with an altered format and the new title "The Dean Martin Comedy Hour." It is also being given one of the worst program slots a network show can get—the tail end of the Friday prime time schedule.

This past season, Julie Andrews, Bill Cosby and Bobby Darin became additions to the list of name stars whose variety series were canceled because of ratings. And this summer the comedy team of Jack Burns and Avery Schreiber is taking a crack at the hardpressed weekly variety field, on ABC-TV, and singer Helen Reddy is doing the same on NBC-TV.

American woman studying secrets of vanishing tribe

LAKE RUDOLF, Kenya (UPI -A young city-bred American girl is engaged in a race against time to record the secrets of one of Africa's vanishing tribes.

Carole Scherrer, 25, a petite, brown-eyed anthropologist from the University of Virginia, arrived at this remote inland sea in April to live 18 months among the Elmolos, the tiniest tribe in East Africa, who have supported themselves for centuries in Kenya's remote northwest corner as lake fishermen.

Carole is completing her doctorate on the tribe's social, economic, political and religious structure.

Isolated from the outside world, without radio newspapers or home comforts, she has adopted the simple lifestyle of her primitive subjects. She lives in a tiny palm thatch hut in the center of Elmolo Village.

A searing 100 degree-plus heat has sucked most life from the surrounding countryside —a bleak area of grey volcanic rock where only a few acacia trees are hardy enough to survive.

"First day I arrived here a huge wind which whistles through the hills each day blew away my tent," Carole said. "Things have steadily improved from there. I have been partially accepted by the tribe and life can be good here. But loneliness is crushing.

"I went to Nairobi last week. You know the first thing I did? I sat in a bath for hours with a glass of sherry. After weeks up where I found I couldn't sit properly my feet were blistered from high heels and people were staring at me."

Carole feels more at home in floppy bush shirt and shorts among the Elmolos —a tribe she believes is quickly vanishing as it is absorbed through marriage into surrounding ethnic groups.

She rises before dawn and heads for the lake which provides her with drinking water and acts as her bath, washtub and food basket. She fishes with the Elmolo women and has learned to skin her catch with sharp rock and salt it.

During the afternoons she talks with villagers, again mostly women, about the tribe.

"When I first arrived villagers were curious to know if I was white all over," she said giggling. "They soon found out when I plaster it with red ochre."

She said with a smile: "My skin peeled once from the sun. That caused a sensation. People thought I had some dreadful disease.

Eighteen months is going to be a long haul, she concedes, and loneliness could eventually prove the victor. She fights it by long walks across volcanic lava and strumming a guitar — her most prized possession. Each Sunday she walks to a nearby Catholic church and lunches with a missionary —the only other white face she regularly sees.

As she talked the tribesmen were hauling in the day's catch of fish which is the staple for almost every meal.

"I like fish. I really do," Carole said. "But you know what happiness is just now — some fresh lettuce, fresh water and fresh vegetables."

Soviet leader saw doves as peace symbol

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI — A dove, symbol of peace since at least the time of Noah, hatched two chicks during the recent Soviet-American summit conference at the Western White house.

Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev saw the baby doves, born near the patio of President Nixon's oceanside villa and interpreted the event as a sign of good luck and a symbol of peace, a White House spokesman said Monday.

Nixon and Brezhnev conferred there June 22 to 24.

Attendance rising at Erotic Art Museum

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — In spite of an enthusiastic opening in March, the world's first "Museum of Erotic Art" is still working to take its place alongside Fisherman's Wharf and the cable cars as a must-see attraction for San Francisco visitors.

The museum, located just off Union Square, features about 2,000 pieces of erotic art collected by Drs. Eberhard and Phyllis Kronhausen, widely known psychologists and authors.

Phyllis Lyon, associate director of the National Sex Forum, which now owns the collection, says the museum is not yet covering its total expenses, which she says are very high because of the downtown location and need for tight security to protect the exhibits.

"But attendance has been rising all the time," she said.

The entrance fee is $2.50, and no one under 18 is allowed.

The collection includes paintings, sculptures, etchings and prints from all around the world. Famous artists, such as Pablo Picasso, Salvador Dali and George Grosz, are represented, along with unknowns.

The Kronhausens, authors of "Pornography and the Law" and other books, have exhibited the collection in Sweden and Denmark, but it was only this spring that it got a permanent home in San Francisco.

"We feel that the enjoyment of erotic art has been far too long the exclusive privilege of the wealthy classes, as has sexual freedom in general," say the Kronhausens. "It is high time that we, as individuals and as a society, extend these privileges to the average citizen regardless of class, educational background or economic status."

"We view the museum as an educational tool rather than a collection of art," says associate director Lyon. "About 95 per cent of the people who come in find it worthwhile."

The first U.S. Mint was established in Philadelphia April 2, 1792.

Cars also polluters of waters

WASHINGTON (UPI A study carried out for the Environmental Protection Agency concludes that cars are primary polluters of water.

Biospherics, Inc., of Rockville, Md., an independent research firm, said in a report issued Monday by the EPA that pollutants spread on roads by autos befoul rivers and streams almost as much as municipal sewage.

The pollutants include asbestos from brake linings, rubber from tires, zinc from oil and tires, lead from gasoline, and nitrogen and phosphorus compounds. Rainstorms carry the pollutants into waterways.

Biospherics worked for a year gathering data for the report Its technicians vacuumed Washington's Capital Beltway to analyze debris.

The firm said it concluded road runoff is an important, heretofore unknown source of Potomac River pollution.

"Altogether, when the data for the Washington area is projected to the entire country, roadway pollution from cars becomes a critical national problem," the study said.

Some defense

By United Press International

Some Eskimos practiced wife-swapping as a means of self-defense, because social custom dictated that an Eskimo who borrowed another's wife could not attack the lender, and had to defend him against attack by others.

MR. AND MRS. GUSTAV FICHTNER

Exercise

If you spend a lot of time at the beach, take advantage of the exercising possibilities. Swimming is one of the best of exercises and jogging on the sand or in the water is good for timming and firming the legs.

Fichtners celebrate 60th anniversary

The 60th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Fichtner 933 E. Columbia Ave., was celebrated at a party at the home of a son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ridgway in Montclair.

Hosting the affair were the couple's eight children, sons Eugene, Arthur and Palmer, and daughters Miss Jeannette Fichtner, Mrs. Irma Webb, Mrs. Richard Maxwell and Mrs. Bernice Scoby, all of Pomona, and Mrs. Ridgway.

The family also includes six grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Mr. Fichtner was born in Russia and his wife was born in Romania. They were married on June 24, 1913, and moved to Pomona in 1941. Mr. Fichtner was a machinist until his reitrement in 1958.

They attend the Lincoln Avenue Reformed Church.

Zorn and Schumacher nuptial vows repeated

Our Lady of the Assumption Catholic Church in Claremont was the setting for the marriage of Miss Sheryl Ann Schumacher and Roger Allen-Zorn Jr.

MRS. ROGER ZORN JR.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Schumacher of Pomona was given in marriage by her father. She presented a single white rose to her mother before joining the groom. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Zorn of La Verne.

The bride carried a bouquet of white roses and baby's breath. She wore a gown of white satin peau fashioned with a high neckline and bodice of peau d'ange lace. The a-line skirt was accented with a flounce of lace that swept to a cathedral train.

Her four-tiered, fingertip bridal veil was trimmed with lace and attached to a Camelot headpiece.

Mrs. Lorrie Cenoz was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Sue Bridwell, Miss Gayla Grove, Miss Linda Posey, Miss Donna Rogers and Miss Pam Arvickson.

Chuck Meadows was best man. Ushers were Ron Schmacher brother of the bride, Ron Zorn, brother of the groom, Eddie Fontaine, Mike Cenoz and John Garcia.

Mrs. Michael Sheffield handled the guest book. The reception was at Orlando's.

They disapprove

Two out of three teen-agers in a Seventeen magazine survey don't approve of interracial dating for themselves. Three out of four oppose such marriages.

Storage space

Home economists suggest that careful attention to storage can make small kitchen appliances a greater joy to the homemaker and add to cleaning ease in the kitchen.

Long life in Sweden, population survey shows

Greenland, or Sahara . . . if you want to be alone

UNITED NATIONS (UPI — For the long life, it's Sweden, and for the lonely life, it's Greenland or the Spanish Sahara.

And, according to United Nations statistics released today, the place for a lot of company is Macao, a tiny Portuguese enclave on the Chinese coast that packs 81,440 persons per square mile.

Macao has the heaviest population density in the world the statistics show, while Greenland and the Spanish Sahara are at the other end of the scale with an official density of zero persons per square mile.

The U.N. publication lists Greenland with 39,600 inhabitants in its 840,000 square miles —most of it covered in ice—and the Spanish Sahara with 76,425 persons in its 102,680 square miles.

Several countries, including Botswana, Libya, Mauritania and Mongola, were listed as having a population density of nearly zero per square mile.

The figures were drawn from the U.N. Statistical Yearbook 1972, which covers longevity and population figures through 1971.

According to the figures, a male child born in Sweden can expect to live for 71.85 years while a female can expect to live 76.54 years. Norway's average is not far behind—71.09 years for males and 76.83 for females.

In the United States, the average figures for both males and females was set at 71.1 years.

In the population ratings, Macao is far down the list of overall numbers, but its 248,636 inhabitants are packed into six square miles. The principality of Monaco runs a reasonably close second to Macao with its 23,400 citizens packed into 467 acres. Other places with a lot of people living close together include Gibraltar, West Berlin, Hong Kong, Singapore and East Berlin.

Who's right?

U.S., Russ scientists in joint Iceland probe

NEW YORK (UPI) — Russian scientists, who believe Iceland is an extension of the European continent, and their American counterparts, who think Iceland is a big bump on the ocean floor, will go there in person together to try to find out which theory is correct.

The expedition will study the ocean floor and seek sites for a deep sea drilling project designed to penetrate the ocean layers of sediment and find out more about the earth's crust.

Five Columbia University scientists will be on board the 405-foot Kurchatov when it sails Saturday, including John Ewing, 48, a seismology expert, and his daughter, Valerie, 22, a 1973 graduate of Barnard College, who studied geology. Sixty-two Soviets will be on board.

According to several Columbia experts who showed up for the arrival, the Russians have not totally taken up the theory of "continental drift" or "plate tecttonics," which is widely accepted in America. It postulates that the earth's land masses were once part of a giant supercontinent at the South Pole that split up and drifted apart.

Rock samples dredged from the ocean floor, Ewing said, hopefully will confirm the theory further and also explain whether Iceland was created by giant upwelings of lava from beneath the earth's crust—as the American scientists believe.

Viktor Kanaev, chief scientist of the Kurchatov, said it is the view of the leader of a Russian expedition that has been in Iceland for three years that the island is a 2-billion-year-old part of the European continent.

Compromise logging bill given okay

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The chairmen of the legislature's two natural resources committees, long stuggling over rival bills to impose controls on California's timber industry, reached agreement Monday on a compromise measure that bears both their names.

The action virtually assures passage this session of legislation providing permanent regulations over logging on the state's eight million acres of privately owned timberlands. For the past two years such logging has been controlled by "emergency" regulations.

"California will become the leader of all states under passage of this bill," said Assemblyman Edwin L. Z'berg, D-Sacramento, whose measure was amended and "weakened" to accomodate Sen. John A. Nejedly, R-Walnut Creek, the author of a rival bill.

The two lawmakers failed to reach agreement last year on rival proposals and appeared headed for another stalemate this year, despite their joint concern that new regulations were imperative.

Under question

Recently, the emergency regulations have come under questioning whether they would be enforcable in a court test since they were designed to be temporary and have been renewed a number of times.

The amended measure (AB227) was approved on a 6-0 vote of Nejedly's Senate Natural Resources Committee and sent to the Finance Committee. Five votes were the minimum required.

Under the bill, a new state Board of Forestry would be created with five members from the general public, three from the logging industry and one representing livestock interests. The board would establish policy for logging on private lands under guidelines spelled out in the bill.

The old Forestry Board was declared unconstitutional by the state Supreme Court two years ago because of its industry domination. Since then, California has not had permanent controls on timber harvesting.

The Nejedly-Z'berg bill sets forth specific cultivating and restocking standards, provides for on-site inspections before, during and after a logging operation, and imposes misdemeanor penalties for violations.

Some what weakened

It is supported by many conservationists groups, although Z'berg said the minor amendments had "weakened" it somewhat.

Throughout the two-year sturggle to legislate new regulations, Z'berg had advocated stronger and more detailed standards than Nejedly. However, recently the two lawmakers have modified their rival bills to capture essentially the same support, including elements of the timber industry.

There was little debate as the committee approved the measure. Lengthy testimony had been heard during a prevuous committee session.

Still alive and facing action before Z'berg's Assembly Natural Resources Committee is Nejedly's bill, essentially a different version of the same proposal.

Nejedly said he would "wait and see" what happens to the joint measure before deciding whether to press on with his own bill.

Z'berg said he would try and seek Finance Committee consideration of the joint bill this week, in an effort to speed it through the legislative process prior to a planned recess this Friday.

Actor serious after surgery

LONDON (UPI) — Actor Jack Hawkins, 62, underwent surgery for a hemorrhage Wednesday night and was reported in serious condition today, a spokesman for St. Stephen's hospital said.

Hawkins, who has suffered from throat cancer, had an operation in the United States in May to be fitted with an artificial voice box.

The spokesman said that Hawkins spent a "satisfactory" night and was "holding his own."

BARGAN BOX WANT ADS GET RESULTS

What's your reason for not buying a home NOW?

TROUBLED OVER HIGH INTEREST RATES

It is true interest rates have risen, but they do seem to have stabilized in the past several months. And while the rates may seem high, they are not climbing as rapidly as are labor and material costs. An increase or a decrease of ½ percent in interest rates only amounts to 30c per month per $1000 on a 25 year loan. Is it really wise to deny yourself the security, pleasure and pride of home ownership on the vague hope of interest rates going down, thus saving you only $3 or $4 a month? The value of your home will increase at a much faster rate than can be gained by any lowering of interest rates. NOW is a good time to buy!

WONDER, WHERE TO BEGIN LOOKING?

Worry no more . . . most folks have found that the best place to shop for that new or lived-in home is in the Classified Real Estate columns of the Progress-Bulletin. It's here (and only here) that each day you'll find the very latest offerings of homes 'for sale' . . . advertised by the area's leading real estate firms and builders. Check the want ads today—and every day—to find the home that satisfies all your needs.

YES NOW IS A GOOD TIME

Ideas for photo bugs on tour

Understand that a camera's lens is a conspicuous spotlight certain to focus attention on your model. So ask the subject before you bang away. Carrying a written translation of your rap in local dialect can bridge the language gap.

Carrying a few snapshots of past "people" pictures that show your liking for the human race, can help convince prospective models that your photographic intentions are huggy rather than demeaning.

Avoid participating in mob-scenes, elbowing two, three or four other photogs as you disconcert a shy subject. Don't promise prints you may not deliver.

Frequently you'll be barraged with "Hey, mister, take my picture!" requests from mugging youngsters or playful adults. In such circumstance I urge you to shoot at least one frame. Refusing to shoot friendly people is poor economy, and may be taken as your judgment that they're unworthy of a second glance.

While not advertising that you let strangers handle expensive equipment, there's certainly merit in letting curious subjects take a look-see through the view finder as you hold the camera. By satisfying their curiosity about your perspective, you may enroll them as eager collaborators. (Note: You should have all equ9pment insured for theft and damage anyhow. Usually this can be done at minimum cost as a rider on your parents' home policy.)

Flash cubes can be a real annoyance and startle old people into a sudden loss of balance, or prompt tearful tantrums from small children.

Best bet: Next time you're in a camera store, ask the clerk to show you how to bounce flash off wals, ceiling or portable reflector to serve as indirect "fill" light. And please watch your litter. A trail of discarded flash cubes, Kodak boxes, etc. is not going to make local people glad you came to their town.

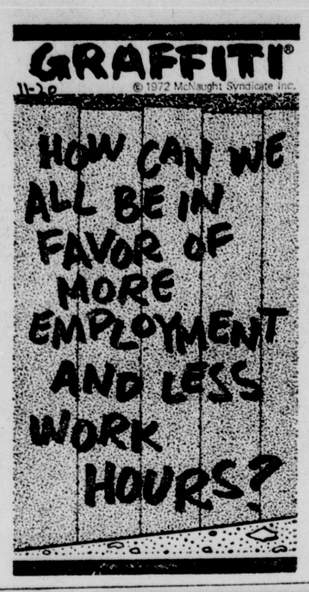

Know when you put down your camera and experience life first-hand rather than through the view finder. So you won't get pictures of the village dancers. OK, but how much richer you'll be for having actually linked arms with them and spun into happy exhaustion as laughing, breathless participant rather than as a detached, distant on-looker.

Don't let the camera be your excuse for not overcoming your shyness and entering into true contact with your fellow human beings.

Airline hijackers have forced rigid security measures. At some foreign airports X-ray devices are employed. Such scanners will fog or ruin your film. To guard against this catastrophe, hand print labels saying "FILM INSIDE, NO X-RAY PLEASE," and affix to any bag that contains exposed or unexposed film in it.

When you reach the gate, ask the security guard to hand inspect your bag and to pass it around rather than through the scanning gate.

While all the foregoing has spoken of cameras, it applies with equal force to the use of tape-recorders and notepads. If people see you taking down their words, they'll want to know why. Be ready to tell them in friendly rap, and if possible bring your explanation to them before they ask for it.

Son dies when he sees slain body of mom

MILLVILLE, N.J (UPI) — An 80-year-old woman was bludgeoned to death and her son apparently suffered a heart attack and died when he found her body.

Dr. Irvin Atkinson, Cumberland County Medical examiner, said an autopsy Monday indicated George Chapman, 50, died of an apparent heart attack Saturday. Chapman collapsed on top of the body of his mother, Mamie Chapman when he found it in her home, the doctor said.

"He was found lying over his mother, a bloody hatchet lying by her head," Atkinson said. A hammer also was near her.

Chapman, head of the chemistry department at Underwood Memorial Hospital, had a history of heart disease, said Atkinson.

State police said they believed an intruder was responsible for the slaying.

Use exercising bike with care at first

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — With all the emphasis on exercising today, I feel my husband and I do not get enough of it. We bought an exercising bike. What I would like to know is, how can we go about it. I mean, how much time to start with, and how should we increase the time. I have started with five minutes three times a day. Am I overdoing it?

Dear Reader — There isn't any set rule for this. It also depends a lot on the type of exercise bicycle you're using. Some are fixed so you can adjust the tension on the wheel and thereby increase the load. People who are in reasonably good physical condition to start with can obviously begin at a higher level than those who are unaccustomed to any significant amounts of physical exercise. In general, and it has to be simply a general rule of thumb for the person I have not seen and not been able to examine or know what his exercise history is, I suggest that he start at a very low level. Of course, if he already has any medical problems he is aware of, he should talk to the doctor before beginning any exercise program.

For the individuals who appear to be in good health and have just not had any significant amounts of exercise, I usually suggest that they start bicycling for three to five minutes at a speed which is comfortable for them and at a tension which doesn't create very much stress on the legs. That is, it should be comfortable and well within the capacity of the person without any strain. Then, the amount of exercise can be increased about a minute a week. Always make certain to stay within a comfortable speed and tension on the wheel and never exercise at a rate that makes you feel that the legs are working too hard or that it causes the heart to beat too fast. If you want to take your heart rate while you're exercising, you can usually do it. For medically unsupervised exercise you should try to keep your heart rate below 120 beats per minute while exercising. If the exercise effort causes your heart to beat any faster than this, you are either pumping too fast or the tension has been turned too tight on the exercise bicycle.

Exercise bicycles are fine because they can be placed in front of the television set. Individuals who spend much time in front of the television set are the very ones who need the exercise, and the exercise should be something besides reaching for potato chips and dip, or just as bad, bending the elbow. It also provides a way of occupying yourself while you'e doing exercise. Pedaling at a very slow rate without any heavy load on the bicycle during your favorite television program is a good way to program a daily exercise
